49 linear feet

Accession number 567

The papers of the Brookwood Labor College were placed in the Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs in September, 1972, by Mark and Helen Starr.

The Brookwood Labor College was a co-educational resident workers' institution situated at Katonah, New York, some forty-one miles from New York City. Founded in 1921, it was the outgrowth of a labor conference held on March 31-April 1 of that year. Its policy called for a progressive, non-factional education for workers as it sought to play an increasing role in the task of building a militant, intelligent, powerful labor movement. Its curriculum focused on the study, analysis, and discussion of the philosophy and policies of labor organizations in the United States and the world, including the American Federation of Labor.

Within a few years after it was established, Brookwood was officially endorsed or financially supported by thirteen national and international unions including the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the American Federation of Teachers, and the United Textile Workers. In 1928 a rift developed between the AFL and Brookwood which led to the withdrawal of support by the AFL-affiliated unions.

In 1930 Brookwood set up an extension department in response to an increasing demand for lectures and courses outside of Brookwood. Earlier, Brookwood had started a program of summer institutes dealing with various labor problems.

In 1933 Brookwood weathered a faculty conflict concerning its policy of non-factional labor education and continued on until 1937 when it closed its doors due to a lack of funds.

Among the many students at Brookwood were Merlin Bishop, Len De Caux, E.J. (Jack) Lever, John Martindale, and Roy Reuther. The faculty included such leaders as Katherine Pollak Ellickson, J.C. Kennedy, A.J. Muste, David J. Saposs, Cara Cook, Tucker P. Smith, Mark and Helen Starr, and Tom Tippet. Fannia M. Cohn, John Brophy, Abraham Lefkowitz, and James H. Maurer were some of the members of the board of directors.
