BIOGRAPHY

A native of Michigan, Owen Bieber (1929-present) was born in North Dorr on December 28, 1929. Mr. Bieber first joined the UAW in 1948 working as a wire-bender in a spring factory. His father was also an autoworker and member of the UAW. Mr. Bieber held multiple positions within the UAW including President of Local 687 Regional UAW Director and Vice-President of UAW.

Beginning at the 27th Constitutional Congress in Dallas, Owen Bieber was elected the 6th President of the UAW in 1983 succeeding Douglas Fraser. He served four consecutive terms. During his presidency, he was faced with challenging issues including the departure of the Canadian Auto Workers in 1985, the downsizing of American auto companies, and increasing competition from foreign auto companies.

He is credited with diversifying the UAW by inviting new members from areas outside of industrial sectors to include both public and private associations. Active in the Democrat party, he became a political force advocating for working people on legislative issues and contributed to bringing President Clinton into the White House. He was vocal on legislation pertaining to national and international trade and the reformation of health care. On an international level, he lead the first trade unionist delegation to visit China meeting with Deng Xiaoping to acknowledge International Labor Day.

Succeeded in 1995 by Stephen Yokich, Owen Bieber retired at the age of 65.

Series V: Office of the President Correspondence

The Presidential Correspondence Series contains letters, clippings, and reports delivered to the UAW Office of the President. The WARN letters in this series document the shift in economic conditions resulting in plant closures and layoffs. The letters of opposition criticize the union's policies and Owen Bieber's personal activities. The Car Complaints demonstrate the union's ability to work on behalf of the consumer. The non-union requests provide evidence of support and opposition within the general public toward the international union. This series contains personal letters, form letters, clippings, propaganda, and opposition letters.

Subseries A: WARN Letters

Letters sent under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act of 1989 is documented in this series. This law requires employers to notify, within 60 days, first the local government, followed by either the worker or union representing the worker, of any anticipated plant closings or mass layoffs. These letters demonstrate the shift of labor in the American Auto Industry to outside the US. The majority of letters include lists detailing worker's job classifications and seniority.

Subseries B: Letters of Opposition

Unsigned letters received by Owen Bieber reflecting opposition toward both his personal behavior and the policies and procedures of the international union. Letters in this collection demonstrate public opposition with the union's strike actions, political involvement, and contract negotiations. Owen's work to end Apartheid in South Africa is also criticized within this collection.

Subseries C: Car Complaints

Letters written by union and non-union automobile consumers regarding problems with their union made vehicles. This series provides evidence of the UAW response to manufacturing and engineering problems within the US Auto Industry. These letters demonstrate the desire and ability of the union to assist consumers with their car problems.

Subseries D: Non-Union Requests

Correspondence with researchers, politicians, corporate entities, and individuals of the general public. This collection includes letters of support and opposition from the international and national community. Letters concerning individual political support, product endorsements, and survey requests are included.

Series VI: Committee Memberships

Correspondence, reports, memos, and clippings that Owen Bieber received from the various committees he served on, including UAW/AFL-CIO committees, local Detroit committees, Presidential appointments, and national committees. Owen's commitment to end apartheid in South Africa is represented through the Presidential appointment to the Advisory Council of South Africa and the Africa Fund. Locally, Owen served on the New Detroit Council, the Council for United Way, and the local NAACP. Nationally Owen served on the Economic Policy Institute and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center.

Series VII: Chrysler Board of Directors

Correspondence, reports, board minutes, clippings, and UAW internal communications concerning Owen's time spent on the Board of Directors.
