Black Theater and Film Production Guild - The Black Theater and Production guild is an organization for the young, up-and-coming creative individuals who need an avenue of exposure in order to present their works of unrecognized genius. It is an university "agency" that attempts to provide meaningful work for its members. By work, I mean an opportunity for each individual artist to perform on stage. As we grow in membership, the Black Theater and Film Production Guild will offer more workshops, seminars and, possibly, scholarships. We would like to begin to travel with some of the shows that we have already presented on Wayne State University stages.

Theater in Detroit is in vogue. The BTFPG members believe that it is possible to make Detroit the arts mecca of the world. Fame is the name of the game. We are looking for directors, playwrights, poets, actors, musicians, composers, stage designers, stage managers, public relations directors, writers, from the old to the young, short, fat, rich and poor, off-and on-campus, students and nonstudents.

Our goal is very humanistic. Life's experience can only be enhanced when there are enough people from different cultural makeups to represent that piece of americana that has long been ignored, black history. Even though (although) there are no color-barriers here, the BTFPG has an obligation to the black population. Why? Because there are very few Black reknown artists in any field. We want to educate america and change the stereotypes. We want to produce great materials, preferrably written by students residing in this, the great city of Detroit, and attending institutions of higher learning here. We know that with your talent and our ability to organize it is very possible that the next oscar or emmy contender can be you. Join the Black Theater and Film Production Guild and let your dream become a reality.
