The papers of the Michigan Welfare League were deposited with the Labor History Archives in February, 1969 by officers of the organization.

Expressing the Progressive Era's concern with the effective and efficient handling of emerging social problems, social workers and interested laymen organized the Michigan State Conference of Social Work in 1912, as ". . . an independent association of citizens interested in the health and welfare of Michigan." A survey of the standing committees as of 1919 suggests the Conference's interests lay originally with feeble-mindedness, the family, health, children, correctional institutions and criminal courts, and Americanization. Throughout the subsequent decades of programmatic growth, in contradistinction both to statewide organizations of a professional or special interest and to departments of state or local government, the association remained independent and voluntary; and its unique and distinguishing characteristics of approach have reflected its broad interests, wide constituency, and financing from all segments of the state.

Despite what the minutes of one meeting records as "a long-time sentiment for keeping the organization a conference only, "continuing interest in a broader program has produced a gradual evolution in (1) legislative committees and conference action on legislation, and (2) efforts to alter the scope and the name of the association. The membership established its first Legislative Committee in 1922, and others have been appointed intermittently in response to such issues as illegitimacy, "outdoor relief," county welfare organization, relief to the unemployed, and unemployment insurance. In 1932 the State Welfare Director requested the association's aid in the revision of the poor law, and throughout the Depression decade the Legislative Committee responded actively to the extreme distress and evident human need by concerning itself with social legislation and its implementation. The last twenty years have seen the League concentrating upon the educational aspects of legislative issues, although it does take stands as an organization on a limited number of issues after due consideration by the Legislative Review Committee.

The changing nature of its functions presented the Conference with the recurring problem of the adequacy and advisability of its name. Different names suggested included the State Council of Social Agencies, State Charities Aid, and Citizens Welfare League. Differences developed within the organization, whether through the agency of the Conference or independent of it entirely, but the independent effort made failed of realization. Finally the membership reached accord on a three point program in 1940, which orientated the Conference towards (1) education regarding social welfare objectives, problems, and methods, (2) improvement of standards in the field of social welfare, and (3) assisting in the development of an adequate and effective public welfare program. Clearly the association had become more than a conference, and on April 11, 1940 the name was changed to the Michigan Welfare League.

Michigan Welfare League

Again in 1963, because of ever broader functions, the narrow sense in which the public viewed the word "welfare", and the necessity for attracting greater citizen participation in its program by distinguishing itself as a voluntary and independent association, efforts were made to change the name this time to the Michigan Citizens League for Health and Social Welfare, but apparently nothing came of the effort.

Until 1937 the association lacked a full-time staff, but during the years of World War II the League combined its efforts with the Michigan Mental Hygiene Society and they shared a common executive. From 1946 through 1948 there flourished a unique partnership with the Michigan United War Fund, which loaned the League a staff member to serve small communities in organization and joint financing. Upon the termination of the arrangement with the Mental Hygiene Society in 1948, the liaison executive assumed full-time duties with the League. The staff increased to two professionals in 1950, three in 1956, and four in 1958, and as of 1962, the full complement numbered four professionals and four clerks.

During the first half of its career, the League's financing came almost entirely from dues and conference fees, with expenditures running under $1,000 annually in the 1920's. Shortly before the name change from the Conference to the League, there occurred a joint meeting of the Michigan Community Chests and Councils and the League's Board, which resulted in local chests assuming the financial support. Its participation in the Michigan United Fund (then termed the United Health and Welfare Fund of Michigan) allowed the League to increase its total expenditures from approximately $27,000 in 1950 to over $94,000 in 1962. 90 per cent of its financing now comes through the State United Fund, although over the past thirty years the League has also received grants from Michigan foundations and occasionally from corporations interested in funding special projects.

Through its annual and regional conferences, forums, and varieties of field services, the Michigan Welfare League demonstrates its current interests in the fields of health, mental health, mental retardation, juvenile and adult corrections, family and child welfare, public assistance, recreation and group work, special education, aging, youth problems, migrant labor, and human relations. These issues also receive attention through the League's publications program, initiated in 1933 with the Welfare News, and subsequently complemented by a Journal, a Legislative Bulletin, and a monthly Newsletter, as well as occasional pamphlets, and project reports.

The Michigan Welfare League Collection covers the period from 1916 to 1965, with the major portion of the papers concentrated in the years from 1955 to 1965.

Description of Series

Boxes

- 1-22 Series one details the League's policy formulation and program development, conference, and institute actions, publications program, and personnel files. Arranged chronologically by subject and by creating agency, the records include minute books, unbound minutes, correspondence, conference proceedings, programs, reports, budget requests and financial reports, regional maps, by-laws, award nomination forms, clippings, press releases, questionnaires, newsletters, journals, and pamphlets, organizational directories and dossiers. The records span the years 1916 through 1965.
- 22-43 Series two documents the League's activities in the public affairs sector, whether through committee, conference, research, lobbying, liason, staffing, publication, or field service activities. Subject areas involved include legislation touching on the health and welfare field in general, state agencies reorganization, public and private responsibility in health and welfare field in general, state agencies reorganization, public and private responsibility in health and welfare work, con-con, public assistance, ADC-U, vocational and other rehabilitation, workmen's compensation, childrens services in their many facets, school drop-outs, crime and delinquency, White House Conference on Children and Youth, adoption law and practices, unmarried mothers, aging and gerontology, migrant farm labor in Michigan, and field services to various communities. Arranged chronologically by subject and by creating agency, the records include minutes, drafts of proposed legislation and copies of bills submitted, correspondence, articles and clippings, research reports, relevant bulletins, proceedings, draft of the new Michigan Constitution, staff reports, state Supreme Court opinions, membership receipts, financial reports. The records span the years 1942-1965.
- 44-48 Series three constitutes the League's general files determined by geographical area, first by the various states, and including Canada, and second by Michigan County, and then by the cities contained therein. The records contain correspondence, brochures, articles, reprints and clippings, drafts of legislation, and minutes. The records roughly span the years 1955 through 1965.

Michigan Welfare League

- 49-54 Series four documents the League's connections with other large organizations of a specialized professional nature or of a state, regional, or national scope. These include the National Conference on Social Welfare, as well as associations having similar functions, United Community Funds and Councils, Michigan Community Chests and Councils, Community Service Council, United Community Services, the Great Lakes Institute, the National Association of State Health and Welfare Conference and Planning Organizations, the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, among others. The records are arranged chronologically by creating agency, and they span the years 1956-1965. The records include correspondence, minutes, publications and clippings, directories, and financial reports.
- 55-56 Series five is a potpourri of subjects and agencies which do not admit of ready inclusion in the foregoing series. Included are correspondence, minutes, publications, award nomination forms, memorials, brochures, research reports, and drafts of proposed legislation. Especially significant subjects include a mental health Committee, drafting a "Human Rights" brochure, a charitable trusts information project, communications with consulting firms, and finally general publicity. The records span the years 1952-1965.
- 57-59 Series six contains two boxes of disparate bound volumes, and one box of miscellaneous clippings. The records span the years roughly from 1957-1965.

A quantity of photographs were removed from the collection and added to the Archives' Special Photography Collection.

Abstract

The Michigan Welfare League, which changed its name to the Michigan League for Human Services in 1971, is a nonprofit organization that advocates for Michigan's low-income residents through research about living conditions and the creation and implementation of programs to offset adversity. As an advocacy group working against poverty, the League largely focuses on public health, welfare programs, childcare, juvenile delinquency, migrant farm workers, and housing. The League led the creation of the Citizens' Council on Agricultural Labor for migrant workers and the Aid to Dependent Children with an Unemployed Father program, in addition to actively encouraging the establishment of the Fair Housing Act in 1968.

The Michigan Welfare League Records contains meeting minutes, research reports, and newsletters created by the League. Additionally, the collection holds correspondence between other nonprofit organizations and Michigan's legislators. There are also documents about the formation of specific programs, and informational materials handed out to Michigan citizens.
