To the Class of February, 1950:

The college graduates of 1950 are the object of unusual popular appraisal. In this year, people's thoughts turn naturally to the meaning of the half-century mark, using this milestone as a vantage point for a view of the past and a glance into the future. The next half century belongs to the age group which the college graduates of 1950 represent. As the members of that group who have had unusual opportunities for education, and thereby, unusual preparation for life and work, the college graduates are viewed as the symbols of our hopes and aspirations for the decades immediately ahead.

As people focus upon the graduates of this year, they have a side-glance at the institutions which produced them. In all the turmoil of 'controversy' over what bodes ill or good for the new era, there is almost universal acclaim of the importance of education as a great force for the conservation and improvement of the welfare of the people.

Wayne, as an institution, is in a position similar to that of the individual graduate. Born in the first half century, it promises fulfillment in the second half. Its early days have had the uncertainty, the awkward growth, the problems of adjustment to environment characteristic of youth; now it approaches maturity in good health, with vigor, ambition, hope, confidence, and competence. It is keenly aware of the fact that the welfare of a host of people is bound up with its own effectiveness and its achievement.

We salute the new half century with you and give to you graduates of the year our best wishes for a full measure of the rewards that you seek. In turn, we trust that Wayne will have, through the years of your life, your interest, your support for its program, and your devotion to its welfare.

Sincerely,
(David Henry)

GOVERNOR WILLIAMS

Governor Williams was a not-too-infrequent visitor on the Wayne campus in 1950. Shown above after speaking at the dedication of State Hall the youthful governor also appeared at the NCAA fencing finals, and several dances.

FOOTBALL

SEASON RECORD

	Win 3		Lose 5
Wayne	48	Southern Illinois		7
Wayne	33	Western Illinois		14
Wayne	7	St. Bonaventure		25
Wayne	14	Quantico Marines		33
Wayne	0	U. of Detroit		41
Wayne	6	Niagara		14
Wayne	7	Toledo		37
Wayne	38	Omaha		26
Totals	153			197

Football prospects looked rosy to Tartar gridders in 1949. After sniffing two early-season victories, the team backed squarely into one thorny opponent after another. Wayne failed to win again until the season finale with Omaha.

Green and Gold supporters, students, faculty, alumni and Detroit newspapermen, felt that a three-pronged combination of new coaches, 18 seniors and a new athletic plant would surely lead to some success.

BUT--Something was lacking!!! Some observers feel that "senioritis" wrecked the team--that the 18 seniors had played too much football before the season began. Others believe that the coaching staff couldn't bring the team back from the bruising setback to St. Bonaventure early in the campaign.

Whatever the trouble was, the season didn't lack its bright spots. Halfback Johnny Hazely picked up right where he left off in 1948 in his old habit of record setting. When the otherwise lackluster season ended, "Big Jawn" had led the Tartar backs in rushing for the third straight year.

In addition, the Port Huron flash set a new game scoring mark against Southern Illinois--24 points on three touchdowns and six consecutive extra points. Those six points from placement were good for another record. When John rang down the curtain, he also held the school's all-time scoring lead of 81 points, most points after touchdowns and the most points scored during one season.

Writing about John's extra point booting brings to mind an interesting question. Can anyone remember who held the ball for Hazely? The answer is Bill Foley who was a star in his own right. Foley's great defensive work saved much embarrassment for Wayne during his four years. Perhaps if the entire team had shown the same drive, skill and spirit that Foley and Hazely exhibited the outcomes of several games would have been radically altered.

Injuries also helped wreck what had promised to be the beginning of the "Golden Era" of Wayne athletics. Perhaps after this one false start, the Tartars can make the next 50 years a lot more enjoyable for the students, alumni, faculty, etc., than the first 50 years.

IN HIGH GEAR ---

The Tartars looked like a grid juggernaut during the first two games of the season. Johnny Hazely (17) is shown being hauled down after a substantial gain in the Southern Illinois fray. Other Tartars are fullback Virgil Florea (18), ends Ed Dopkowski (31) and Warren Fraleigh (13).

--- STRIPPED

Then someone threw a monkey wrench into the Wayne grid gears. The Tartars' hopes for a successful campaign ended with a disastrous 41-0 trouncing by U. of Detroit. U. of D's Don Nelson (1) is shown grabbing a touchdown pass to complete the Titans' scoring. Bill Foley (9) arrives too late.

GRAD GRIDIDDERS

ANGELO CORATTI

Although weighing only 155 pounds, Coratti earned a spot in the Tartar defensive backfield.

A marine during the war, Coratti saw extensive service in the Pacific.

GENE D'AMBROSIO

D'Ambrosio never played high school football but was Wayne's first-string quarterback for two years.

In 1949, he threw five touchdown passes and set up several other scores. Gene was also a constant threat as a runner.

Co-captain of the 1949 grid squad, Demerjian was one of the better Tartar tackles.

His work was very conspicuous in the Toledo game where he spent more time in the Toledo backfield than the Ohio backs did.

ED DEMERJIAN

Ed Dopkowski was Wayne's best offensive end during his four year tenure. Tall, 6 foot 1, and fast, Ed could be used on an effective end-around play as well as for his pass-snaring abilities.

ED DOPKOWSKI

'MARTYRED' BY THE SAINTS

The strutting Tartars first had their toes stubbed in the St. Bonaventure game. The top picture shows St. Bonaventure returning Hazely's kickoff to the Bonny 28 yard line. The Indians ran up a 25 to 0 halftime lead.

Above, Bruno Marana awaits a Bonny runner with open arms and no doubt dark intentions, judging by the apprehensive look on the ball carrier's face.

 Je. 50

One of the finest punters in recent Wayne history, the ex-Pershing high star averaged over 37 yards a kick at Wayne. Although bothered by several leg injuries, Florea could smack enemy lines and was fast enough for end thrusts.

VIRGIL FLOREA

Bill Foley was perhaps the most underrated man on the Wayne team. Mostly on defense, Foley never missed a tackle and in spite of height disadvantages, did a terrific job on pass defense.

Foley came through with several fine runs when called upon to fill an injury-riddled backfield on offense.

One position where Wayne had strength and depth at the halfback slot. John Hazely, William Morgan, Don Godbold, Lorenzo Wright, Irv Petross, Angelo Coratti and John Tolwinski all performed capably and the halfback spot didn't give coach Zarza too much worry.

Here Willie Morgan (11) is slashing for an easy first down against the Quantico Marines aided by an effective block by Virgil Florea (18).

Versatile best describes six-foot Warren Fraleigh. A physical education major, Fraleigh won athletic awards in both basketball and football.

Warren suffered a very painful mouth injury but was back in the lineup the very next week.

WARREN FRALEIGH

Don is another two-sport man at Wayne. He was a dash man for Coach Dave Holmes' track team as well as playing end and halfback for the grid squad.

Don's speed made him hard to stop in a broken field.

DON GODBOLD

JOHNNY HAZELY

Not much more can be written about John. He was quite an author himself, doing a very competent job of rewriting the record book at Wayne.

Hazely never complained and was respected alike by friend and opponent. Wayne athletics owe John a LARGE THANK YOU.

A big-bruising lineman, Loftin asked no quarter and gave none. He played each game up to the hilt and worked so hard in the St. Bonaventure game that he fainted after the affair.

A shoulder separation hampered Loftin in 1949.

IVERSON LOFTIN

Athletes Foot

Well, the Tartar gridders finally got Emerson Cole (32) of Toledo surrounded (at least with their pictures on this page.) Cole was named to the little-All-America team and his running against Wayne certainly merited this award. Bill Foley is shown clinging to the elusive Cole.

Steve Zukowski has his work cut out for him in this play. He is trying to evade two Quantico Marines to tackle the ball carrier at the far left. Note, the resemblance to actor Robert Mitchum--no wonder Wayne lost 33 to 13.

BRUNO MARANA

Co-captain Marana was the best linebacker on the team in many's opinion. In 1948, Bruno played the entire sixty minutes against Toledo and U. of D. Injuries bothered him in 1949 but Marana still managed to make his presence felt.

CHARLES MCHENRY

Things didn't break right for Chuck in 1949. He suffered a broken thumb early in the season and it kept him side-lined. McHenry was born in Newfoundland and was in service for four years.

WILLIAM MORGAN

Morgan never played football in high school. He came out of the army to win a starting position on both the offensive and defensive 11's lineup. Morgan almost best U. of D. with a brilliant pass interception in 1948.

SUREN SRABIAN

Another two-sports award winner, Suren was a guard on the basketball team and a defensive fullback on the grid squad.

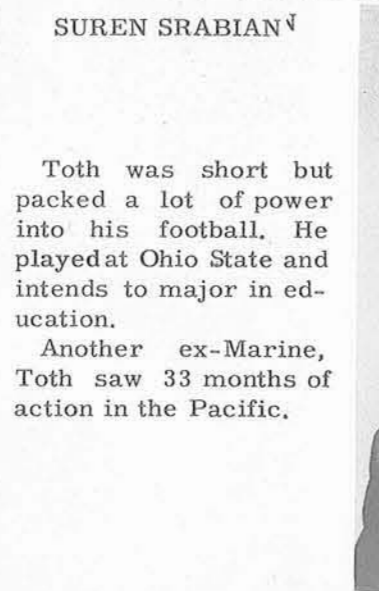

Srabian is married and served in the Marines--good experience.

ART SWERDLOW

Art Swerdlow can play a lot of football but he can perform another feat superbly.

At a dinner table the likeable tackle is without peer. Swerdlow was in a pre-med course.

NICK TOTH

Toth was short but packed a lot of power into his football. He played at Ohio State and intends to major in education.

Another ex-Marine, Toth saw 33 months of action in the Pacific.

STEVE ZUKOWSKI

"The Iron Rock from Iron River Mich." they called him. To find out why, ask any opponent who was hit by the 220-pound tackle.

Steve's staunch line-play gave the Tartar defenses much of their starch.

BRUCE WAHA

Waha was a team player who could always be counted on to come up with a tension-cracking gag. Bruce started out as a quarterback under the tutelage of Johnny Hackett but was switched to guard.

A broken ankle sidelined Bruce the latter part of 1949.

HOMECOMING

Here's another classic example of Wayne's bevy of beautiful women. Freshman Marjorie will be around for three more years. (Wise seniors would do well to take some grad work to remain on campus longer.)

Miss Malone was picked by the football team to reign at the University's Homecoming Game. Who says football players aren't beauty conscious.

JACKIE KURKIE KAROL KURKIE EILEEN BAYLESS RAOMA BAYLESS

Wayne's sister majorettes leave Wayne and enthused gridiron spectators after four seasons of expert twirling antics. The Kurkie-Bayless foursome could be counted upon to come up with new and novel tricks at each game. We'll all miss the sister majorettes.

The Tartar's crack marching band of 100-plus musicians consistently cooked up menus of precision marching and ingenious formations. Although the team lost occasionally the band never was out-classed.

Belle Brummel

GOVERNOR'S BALL

At the dance

Lovely Barbara Brummel, far prettier than the rose bouquet she is carrying graciously reigns over the 1949 Governor's ball at the Book-Cadillac's Crystal Ballroom.

Here's a section of the throngs that jammed every nook and cranny of the Crystal Ballroom. Not much room for fancy-dancing, but no one seems to mind.

FOUR ROSES

JOAN MISH BARBARA BRUMMEL (sitting) NORMA JOHNSON JEWELL HERRINGTON PEEL

Someone must have cracked a pretty good joke, judging from the smiling faces of Miss Brummel and her court of former Governor's ladies.

Smiling Fred N. Smiley, a Wayne law school alumnus, crowns the pretty head of Homecoming Queen Marjorie Malone while Phoebe Pape, left, one of the court, looks on approvingly.

It was a busy night for Miss Malone but she loved every minute of it. Here, she presents Stan McFarland with a trophy for a winning float. Paul Czamanske, Jr., center, describes the goings-on to the crowd.

LOST HIS HEAD

Tara had their share of trouble before winning the trophy for the outstanding float at Homecoming.

Before they could get into U. of D. stadium, Tara had to dismantle it. (right) Once Ol'Man Tartar got his head back inside the stadium, he went on to take the cup.

Tau Kappa Epsilon, national social fraternity dreamed up this wonder. Note the foot-power behind the roller.

Alpha Sigma Alpha, women's national social organization wasn't going to let the men get ahead of them so they concocted this creation-- Boo!!

The Senior Board, governing body for the class of 1950, is composed of twenty-five members who were elected in the annual spring election by the class.

Because the class numbers more than two thousand students it is necessary for a smaller group to govern and carry on the official business.

The Senior Board sponsors all the class activities, Swing-In, Senior Ball, Swing-Out and class socials and convos. The Senior Board also enters into university wide activities such as Wintermart and Homecoming.

The Class of 1950 has the reputation that everything they undertake is successful both socially and financially. One of the few class boards that has come to its senior year with a good sized treasury.

The Senior Board was very instrumental in getting the university to adopt a class ring with a universal design that can be used ad infinitum.

PUBLICATIONS

University Print Shop

Frank P. Gill
Student Publications Advisor

President Henry Dean Spathelf Bob Rodger

In September 1949, The Student Activities division of Wayne University set up its own lithograph shop, thereby making Wayne University the second college in the country to install and run its own lithograph shop. Students perform the bulk of the publishing work, with the exception of operation of the giant cameras and presses.

Putting out the various publications on campus became a giant paste-up process and after the kinks were ironed out, the new system's value to the University soon became apparent.

COLLEGIAN

Jeanne Smith
Editor

Editor Smith walked into a slew of scotch tape, scissors, paste and electrical typewriters. After several weeks of orientation, the Collegian took on its usual professional look and filled the University's needs more than adequately.

Don Pilette, editorial director of the Collegian and feature-editors Maurice Vincent and Jim Callaghan confer with Shirley Cramer. With the new lithograph system, problems were numerous and many such meetings were the order.

Dave O'Neal Gene Lesney Shirley Cramer Bill Thomas

Managing editor, Shirley Cramer, surrounded by her photography staff, inspects a photo submitted by Thomas. Two new strobolight camera units made the photographers' jobs easier and led to better pictures.

A group of reporters working toward the 5 p.m. deadline, take time out to pose for the photographer at the Collegian.

GRIFFIN

With the advent of the lithograph system, Operation Griffin became a large paste-up job. One-hundred-eighty pages and three gallons of rubber cement later we owed thanks to the following who helped clear up the dreary task.

AL GUZZO

MAN... IS IT COLD OUTSIDE!

Basketball

Al Guzzo, Wayne's diminutive cage star, had a busy season. After just missing in an attempt to break the school scoring record early in the year--he went wild in the season finale against Akron and tallied 31 points to crack Jim Rucinski's old mark of 26 points.

MISS WAYNE 'U' of 1970? --Dick Hall's cute daughter served as mascot for the Tartars in the Quantico Marine game. In spite of Miss Hall's efforts, however, her daddy's teammates lost to the Marines.

Dick Hall, probably inspired by his daughter, leaps at an almost impossible angle to score early in the Toledo contest. In spite of Dick's yeoman effort the Ohioans won.

MORE AND MORE--How many hundreds of times during the season did basketball followers see this and like scenes re-enacted. Ralph Pershing is the marksman.

Ball Please

SEEN A GHOST--It's a basketball game all right, but judging by the expression on the participants' faces you would think a spook has just escaped from the out-stretched arms of the player in the foreground. Note the agonized looks on the faces of Al Guzzo (peeking out on the right), Ron Condon Dick Hall and John Tolwinski.

Cross Country

Wayne University was host to the 1949 AAU Cross-Country at Warren Valley. Fred Wilt, the FBI man from Washington won the meet. A surprising crowd of 2,000 spectators turned out in near-zero weather to watch the four-mile-run.

Chalmers Alexander, Wayne's top hill-and-dale man, is shown toiling up a steep, snowy hill. He finished 19th in the meet. This same hill proved too much for Bob Black, the meet's favorite.

Under a beautiful winter sky, Curt Stone, formerly of Penn State, takes an early lead. Coach David Holmes set a twisting turning course that tested the nation's best runners.
