Having as our province the entire field of student activities, the Griffin staff has diligently sought out such points as will be of lasting interest. We shall have achieved our purpose if the student body concurs in agreeing that the events of the year nineteen twenty-nine have been set down faithfully, interestingly and artistically.

A Year of Opportunity

PREFER to think of this school year as another year of opportunity that has come to two groups, faculty and student body. Each group has its own function to perform in college work. This dual relation that exists between students and faculty suggests that the following are some questions that the members of the student body should answer. Can we justify our year of college life? Have we given our best to college activities and class discussions? Have we considered our college work as seriously as we would any business in which we might engage? Have we been building a record for which we offer no apology?

Society provides buildings, equipment, and faculties to aid the student in answering these questions. College students of other years have been developing principles on the basis of which these things may be judged. Young men and women force their withdrawal from colleges and universities because they neither work for themselves, nor do credit to the institution that extended them an opportunity.

Success in life may not depend on being a college graduate or upon having a scholastic record that reflects careful thinking, but the probability is that neither of them will be a millstone around the neck of its owner.

Student Activities

SINCE the Griffin is primarily a record of student activities for the past year, it may not be out of place at this point to inquire into their real significance in college life.

It has been suggested that students become interested in athletics, forensics, dramatics, and student politics, because, in common with other humans, they like the applause of their fellows.

Another reason sometimes given is the other common human tendency to follow the crowd. A writer in one of our leading magazines said recently that college students "know that distinctions attained outside of the classroom—pave the way to success in the business and professional world."

As one who believes that the importance now given to student activities is justified, the writer would like to present what he considers some of the other benefits to be derived from a sane participation in such activities.

Participation in student activities allows a greater measure of self expression than the formalism of the classroom permits. Opportunity for contacts with fellow students is also greater. Successful management or participation in some college function leads one naturally to other undertakings besides contributing to the upbuilding of confidence in self.

The aspects of student activity just enumerated tend to make college more nearly a preparation for life and to render the individual student more capable of playing the part which will fall to his lot after graduation.

The Evening Session

THE modern city is responsible for many innovations in our educational system and one of the most significant of these is the development of organized adult education. Since a large majority of adults are employed during the day, a comprehensive educational program for adults necessarily involves late afternoon and evening classes.

The growth of evening and continuation schools presents a challenge to a decision on the vital question, "What is the objective in public education?" Is it to produce an intelligent and educated citizenry, or is it to train a comparatively few selected individuals in the arts and sciences, that they minister to the comfort and well-being of the mass?

If the former is our ideal, each citizen may hope for an opportunity to develop his latent talents along any constructive line in which he may be interested. Then society will benefit through the initiative of the individual units of which it is composed.

If the latter is our ideal, the initiative of the mass will be sacrificed but society will gain from the benevolent activities of minds selected for superior talent along specialized lines.

Universal adult education, therefore, represents a new phase of an old problem, i. e., the problem of democracy. In the past, democracy in education has slowly won its way. The goal is not yet attained, but the present expansion of adult education is strong evidence of progress.

DON S. MILLER, Dean,
Evening Session.

College of Pharmacy

THE College of Pharmacy is enjoying its most successful year; the enrollment is the largest in its history. Over twenty per cent of the entering students have taken courses in liberal arts—among this group are five who have had bachelor degrees conferred upon them. This would indicate that Pharmacy, as a profession, is attracting people with better educational foundations than previously.

The faculty and students of our College are happy in the thought that they are rendering a very essential health service to the city of Detroit in return for the educational facilities so generously provided by our citizens.

ROLAND T. LAKEY, Dean,
College of Pharmacy.

Legal Ethics

THE standards of a lawyer are known as legal ethics. It is a code of conduct governing the lawyer in his relation to the bench, to his fellow members of the bar, to his clients, and to the public.

The business man tests his conduct by the money-making results. The lawyer, on the other hand, is not considering the money he is making as the prime incentive or the real test of the propriety of his conduct. He must aim first at giving his client service and this service must be according to the best standards of his profession.

The whole matter of legal ethics is an ideal of professional conduct which it is difficult if not impossible to convey to students by precept or lectures. Such means are not without their value but it is only when the young lawyer has learned to feel about his chosen calling in the right way that it can be said that he has acquired the proper attitude on this matter of legal ethics.

It may be acquired by association with older members of the bar who exemplify in their daily life these rules of conduct. In that sense, in every session of a law school and in every class room in law, legal ethics is being taught. If the student does not emerge therefrom with a love for his profession and a willingness to make sacrifices to uphold its honor, he cannot be said to know anything of legal ethics, no matter how glibly he can rattle off the thirty-two Canons of Legal Ethics prepared by the American Bar Association. It must be a matter of educating not only the mind but the heart also.

Senior Class History

RVERETT PAUSCHERT and Jean Persons have been president and vice-president, respectively, of the Class of '29 for the four years of its history. Its secretary, Julia Riley, has held that position for the past three years, and James Buckley served as treasurer this year and last. Al Eckel and James Tait were secretary and treasurer during the Freshman year, and William Streng was treasurer as a Sophomore.

As Freshmen, 1925, the class won the push ball contest, but lost the tug-of-war to the Sophs. There was no flag rush that year, however, as the wily Frosh had previously pulled up the pole which was to carry the Soph pennant. Later that year the Frosh Flurry, for which Henry Hale was the general chairman, was held in the gymnasium, which had been converted by the use of appropriate signs and decorations into a Western bar-room.

The following year the outcome of the field day events was directly reversed. The class lost the flag rush to the Frosh but won the tug-of-war and the push ball contest. The Soph Prom, held at the Wardell, in the charge of Al Parnie, was a success both financially and socially.

The big social achievement of the class in 1927 was the J-Hop, held at the Cadillac Athletic Club and directed by Harold Hickman. The Junior Girls' Play given that year, produced under the direction of Professor Scott, assisted by George Totten, was also pronounced a great success.

The graduation exercises of the Class of '29 mark a distinct step forward in the bringing together of the Detroit municipal colleges. This is the first year that the graduating exercises were held jointly with the Detroit College of Medicine and Surgery, The Detroit College of Pharmacy, the Detroit College of Law, and Teachers College. Commencement was on Tuesday, June 18, in the Masonic Temple.

Junior Class History

THE Junior Class has experienced a very successful year. It has been the aim of the class to foster a real College spirit and to support all College activities. The Class of '30 feels that it has lived up to the standards it has set for itself.

The administration of the class business was well handled by the class officers: George Berkaw, president; Helen Jo Baldwin, vice-president; Elizabeth Busse, secretary; and Elmer Pollakowski, treasurer. The representatives of the class to the Student Council were Edwin McKay, Genevieve Philbrick, and John Batty.

The most important event of the social year was the J-Hop, given by the Class of '30 in the Crystal Ballroom of the Masonic Temple. The dance was in charge of Landes Bell. In the field of dramatics, the Junior girls proved that the Junior Class is capable of producing a very good evening's entertainment when they presented three one-act plays in the College Auditorium. Helen Jo Baldwin was general chairman of the plays which were directed by Professor Preston H. Scott.

The class has, since its inception into the College, stood for co-operation and aggression in the matter of student activity. During their third year of undergraduate work the students of the Junior Class have upheld the traditions and honor of their class and College.

Sophomores Class History

THE Sophomores chose Victor Spathelf this year to succeed Harry Theisen as president, and promoted Helen Tackabury from the office of secretary to that of vice-president. Margaret Darnell and Edwin Dittmer were elected to the offices of secretary and treasurer, respectively.

At the class games staged at Belle Isle on Thursday, October 11, the Sophs rallied round the flag in an admirable exhibition of loyalty and managed to keep it out of the hands of the Freshmen. In spite of their most valiant efforts, however, they were defeated by the Frosh in the push ball contest and the tug-of-war.

Swift was the retaliation of the class of '31, however, and with avenging shouts, the Sophs dragged the presumptuous Frosh to defeat, squelching them with a score of 27-13 in the annual football game, held at Kelsey Field on November 5.

The Soph Prom on November 30 dedicated the new floating floor in the Fountain Ballroom of the Masonic Temple. Edwin Dittmer was in charge of the dance, with the following committee to assist him: Margaret Darnell, Helen Tackabury, Eugenia Johnson, Norman Dean, Fred Cork, Leslie Langs, and David Beauvais. Two hundred couples danced to the music of the Barcelonian Orchestra, directed by Jack Kneisel himself. A number of alumni were present; and as a reward for wearing their pots so compliantly, the Freshmen were also invited to this affair.

Freshman Class History

FOSTER WINNIE served as president of the Class of '32. The other officers were: Alice Gullen, vice-president; Kathryn Bowman, secretary; and Jerome Rothenberg, treasurer. Alice Gullen was also president of the Freshman Commission, and Kathryn Bowman, secretary of the same organization. Members of the Commission are: Irma Allen, Ruth Bastow, Margaret Common, Adelaide Donalson, Audrey Eckert, Shirley Forman, Gerda Hansen, Eleanor Kindred, Elsie Koch, Georgiana Mott, Florian Nelles, Dorothy Owen, Virginia Pennington, Virginia Remer, Pauline Thompson, Doris Weiss, Wanda Werner, and Thomasene Lewis.

With Foster Winnie as captain, the Frosh forces came off victorious in the push ball contest and the tug-of-war at the class games, losing the flag rush to the Sophs.

The Freshman booth at the W. S. G. A. bazaar, where Christmas cards were sold under the direction of Alice Gullen, attracted favorable comment.

In the fall semester, Freshman girls wore blue berets stamped "32" in gold to correspond to the men's gray pots, which took the place of the old green and gold ones. These indications of the lowly state of Freshmanhood were enthusiastically worn until their cremation at the pot night festival, which made up a part of the spring games, and was followed by a dance at the Belle Isle casino.

One of the most important social events of the season was the Frosh Flurry, held at the Masonic Temple on May 3, in charge of Homer Zorn.

DETROIT CITY LAW SCHOOL

Senior Class History

WE HAVE come to the inevitable parting of the roads, and stand here, the Class of 1929, on the point of graduation, soon to disband. The other classes return in the fall, but we return no more, and we pause in retrospect, a little regretful, though the future beckons us to our mistress, the Law.

Our memories turn to a day when, not without some doubt and misgiving, we assembled, strangers to each other. The spirit of the pioneer, however, dominated us all and soon our experiences and knowledge acquired from other Law Schools had crystallized into a class of fine spirit. It was four years ago, yet owing to one of the tricks of time, it seems but yesterday. And in this interval so short in seeming, we have acquired a fellow-feeling which will survive the years.

We started in pursuit of Lady Law with smooth and youthful faces, but we are leaving with faces aged and brows furrowed from long and continued fear of "The poverty of the English language"—"The doctrine of equitable conversation"—see "Pomeroy"—"Now suppose you were city corporation counsel, what would you do?"—"What is the difference between fire, marine, and life insurance?"—"What is the rule in the Bishop of Durham case?"—"What is the theory of de facto corporation?" These and many other questions, doctrines and maxims of the law have been a source of constant irritation to us as students of the law.

We have had our happy years of fellowship and achievement. We count ourselves fortunate in our associations with each other and with our instructors.

Our history as a class having come to a close, we can only affirm that these years have been infinitely worth while though these years be behind us, yet they are of us and in one sense will continue with us through the whole future. For they have become part of us and are built into our being as brick and mortar is built into a wall.

And so, though our ways lie far apart and take us to many different places, we are glad in knowing that we preserve our memories and friendships to the end.

Senior Class History

THE Class of '29 has just completed three years of scholastic and social activity. Being the largest class in the history of the College of Pharmacy it has been able to do much more socially than was formerly possible, but at the same time it has acquitted itself well in undertakings directly connected with the profession.

The class has taken active part in the programs of the American Pharmaceutical Association, and of the Detroit Retail Druggists Association. During the past year two students of the College of Pharmacy were elected to the executive staff of the American Pharmaceutical Association for one year terms. The help of the Senior Class was also instrumental in making a success of "Pharmacy Week." During this week an educational program designed to acquaint the public with some phases of the pharmaceutical science was carried out. Several of the window displays arranged by the Seniors were given much praise by prominent pharmacists and physicians.

Two social affairs which were originated by the Class of '29 in 1927 have since become yearly events. The first of these, a smoker, was held at the Statler Hotel. At this first meeting there was such a fine showing of the students and alumni that there was a general desire expressed to have a similar affair the following year. In 1928 the Pharmacy Smoker was held in Webster Hall. As this book goes to press final arrangements are being made for the 1929 gathering.

The other social event, which has always been so enthusiastically received that it has become an annual affair, a picnic, was first given jointly by the Detroit Creamery and the Class of '29. Baseball, horse-shoe, and quoits were played, and prizes were given to the winning baseball team. The Creamery has taken an active part in the picnics which have been given since that time.

The Class of '29 has in all instances given their support to social affairs of a more formal nature. This last year was climaxed by the Senior Ball, which was so great a success that it indeed served as a wonderful "send-off" to those who will no longer be able to attend these affairs as students.

The Advantages of an Athletic Conference

THE widespread popular interest in professional baseball undoubtedly depends largely on the grouping of the teams into various leagues. If the newspapers should discontinue publication of league standings and give only the results of the various games, interest would rapidly fall off. This added element of interest is also stimulated by the existence of college athletic leagues, such as the "Big Ten," the Ohio Conference, and our own Michigan Collegiate Conference.

One of the most important reasons for belonging to a conference is that you play other schools which must maintain the same scholarship standards as does your own. A college that does not belong to any conference is quite likely to have a lower standard than one that is a conference member, for the reason that conference rules must be lived up to, whereas, in the case of a non-conference college, the local committee may make its own rules and enforce them or not as it sees fit.

If a conference is formed of colleges in the same vicinity (as it should be), the element of expense is lowered, since more games are usually played with conference members than with non-conference schools.

The governing board of our conference consists of two representatives from each of the four member institutions, so that the athletic committee of each institution can consider what changes in rules would be beneficial and through these two representatives bring these matters to the attention of the league as a whole. So far, our conference seems to be quite successful, although interest would probably be increased by the addition of two or more colleges.

Football Review of 1928

IN THE most disastrous season of Detroit City football, the Tartar team managed to win only two games of eight played. A summary of the record is herein set forth, followed by the logical causes and a discussion of the possibilities of their elimination.

Coach Holmes could not find much competition in his next year's charges, and the Varsity easily romped over the Freshmen, winning 24-0. In the second contest Detroit City visited Manchester, and was quite lucky in obtaining a 6-6 tie by virtue of a last minute break. In the last game away from home, the Tartars fell before the Hillsdale eleven in a poor contest, emerging 19 points behind.

Western State Normal officially opened the home schedule for the Tartars by administering a 45-0 whipping. In the only game in which our eleven can really be called victors, Toledo University was spanked most unexpectedly, earning a 13-6 lesson. In the last three games of the season, Bowling Green, Ypsilanti Normal, and Mt. Pleasant Normal ran up nearly a century of points while the Holmesmen were held scoreless.

A few men on the squad must be given due recognition: Captain Stuart, Pollakowski, Boglarsky, Thurman, and Backus. Stuart did not play in most of the games, but he certainly acquitted himself well when he did—he always gave all he had. Pollakowski played center and he played a good game considering that it was his first real chance in major competition. Backus must be commended for his steadiness. He was never lying down on the job, and improvement could be noted in his blocking and tackling toward the close of the year. Boglarsky scintillated in the backfield, and he was the most serious threat on the team. Thurman was voted the second best defensive half-back in the Michigan Collegiate Conference.

The attitude of the student body as a whole seems to be that football is a sport which should be fostered at the College of the City of Detroit. The student body demands football regardless of the caliber, and if the school's name be athletically lowered in esteem, if financial losses be incurred, if only ten men turn out for the team—regardless of all that, the Tartars will meet other institutions on a field whereon twenty-two men are supposed to do battle.

J. Boglarsky

W. Weatherhead

The College of the City of Detroit, being a comparatively new institution, is as yet handicapped in many ways. Many facilities which are accepted as a matter of course in older institutions are still lacking. The school has no adequate field upon which to train candidates in the fundamentals of college football. Lockers are inadequate, as are rooming necessities at the playing field at present, although various reforms are promised for next fall. The field itself is no place for collegiate competition and must either be properly sodded and equipped with stands, or a new gridiron sought. This situation should be recognized by the student body, and, although a certain amount of criticism is necessary to bring about reforms, a helpful attitude should be adopted. It should be realized that conditions are being bettered as rapidly as possible, and in the meantime every man interested in football should turn out. It is known that there are a number of former high school football stars gracing the school corridors who refuse to come out for the team. They will not come out unless conditions are bettered; until facilities are improved, etc., etc. After all, it isn't the lack of a locker or two that affects the caliber of a team.

M. Stuart

Thanksgiving Day Game

BEFORE an enthusiastic crowd of two thousand spectators, Detroit City and Mt. Pleasant clashed in their tenth annual Thanksgiving Day game at Roosevelt Field. The final score, 23-0, was indicative of the superior strength and ability of the Normal School team; but it does not tell the tale of a fighting Green and Gold aggregation that made their opponents work for every gain made. Mt. Pleasant came down from the north with a characteristically big and experienced squad, which included eighteen lettermen, two of whom were playing their fourth year of college football, and six of whom had had three years of varsity experience. Opposed to them was a light but scrappy Tartar outfit that was outweighed twenty pounds to the man and considerably handicapped by injuries received in previous games.

It was the final tussle of the gridiron season, and although it ended in a Detroit defeat, it brought a measure of glory for the Detroit City players who, laboring against great odds, never for a moment lost the battling spirit that has been a tradition of these Thanksgiving Day games for a decade. By virtue of winning, Mt. Pleasant retained possession of the old oaken bucket, which is the symbol of victory in this annual affair.

The day preceding was designated as Homecoming Day and was devoted to a "pep" program. Featuring the event was a matinee dance in the early evening, followed by a rally in the auditorium. The festivities were climaxed by a snake dance to the College field, where a huge bonfire was lighted.

Freshman Football Review

THE Freshman football team had a most successful season considering the handicaps under which it was forced to work. After only seven days of practice the Frosh played the Varsity and lost by a 24-0 score. In the next game the Frosh beat Port Huron Junior College 6-0, in one of the best games of the season. Highland Park Junior College, next on the list, was beaten by a 26-0 score. The Detroit Institute of Technology was next played, and in a close, well played game, the Freshman team lost by the score 6-0. The next game, with Ypsilanti, was lost, 55-0. The outstanding players of the season were Captain Nieman, half back; Jamieson, full back; Ballantine, tackle; and Yockey and Landon, ends.

The team was handicapped during the greater part of the season by the loss of several of the regulars who were kept out of the game by injuries. The fact that the practice field could not be obtained by the Frosh team until after four o'clock in the afternoon, also prevented the formation of a first class team.

This year's Frosh squad promises some very good material for next year's Varsity. The squad was also exceptionally high scholastically. Coach Balcer stated that out of a squad of thirty-eight men not one was declared ineligible during the entire season.

Basket Ball Season

WITH four regulars back from last year's championship team, prospects looked quite bright for another successful basket ball season when the squad took to the court for the first practice session. The team was led by Captain Webb Evans, the other three experienced men being Kaufman, Schecter, and Wachter. This nucleus was bolstered by the presence of Jake Wenzel and McNaughton from last year's reserves, and Pollakowski, a big football man who was trying for center berth. The former freshman squad added such promising players as Crane, Marshall, John Wenzel, Sieger, and Humphrey.

When actual competition started, it was plain to see that there was something lacking in the smooth teamwork that had characterized the play of the previous year's team which established the record of nineteen victories in twenty games played. The individual ability and speed were still there, but there was some intangible absence of coordination that could not be remedied. Various combinations of players were tried but they did not meet with any permanent degree of success.

The season opened with the customary game against the Alumni, the graduates beating the varsity 33-26. A number of former stars were present in the Alumni line-up, including such well-known players as Gunn, Tenenbaum, Lightbody, Ertell, and Davidow. The varsity reserves were used during the entire first quarter and the graduates ran up a lead that was never overcome, even though the regulars played the remainder of the fray.

Rather easy victories were gained by the Tartars in the next two contests. The first was played in the local gym and the University of Western Ontario, a newcomer to the Green and Gold basket ball schedule, was the victim, losing 40-20. The other took place at the University of Toledo, one of Detroit City's oldest rivals on the court, and the Ohioans took the short end of a 41-28 count. Then Detroit in turn was host to Toledo here and did the polite thing by allowing the boys from the Buckeye state to squeeze out a one point victory, 34-33. This was the first basket ball game that the Tartars have dropped to Toledo in five years of competition.

Mt. Pleasant presented a big, fast squad to confront the Detroiters in the first conference game of the season, January 11. The contest occurred on the Up-Staters floor and when the final whistle blew, the Northerners trotted off the court winners by a 37-27 count. Another conference tilt followed, this time Ypsilanti being the hosts. They encountered little trouble in turning back the Green and Gold, 45-24. Following this the University of Michigan "B" team trounced the varsity 36-21. The game was fairly close until the last quarter, when the Wolverines rapidly drew away to a clean-cut victory.

Then on January 26 the annual basket ball trip got under way. The itinerary this year covered somewhat the same ground as that of last year, but different opponents were met. Tri-State University of Angola, Indiana, was the first team encountered and the Tartars were victorious in a rather easy 34-15 contest. Wilmington, Ohio, proved a stumbling block in the following fray, which they won 27-17. Then came a Detroit victory over Kent Normal, the final score being 37-21. The Green and Gold basketeers then suffered a complete reversal of form, dropping the next game to Westminster College, 52-15. This was the most one-sided defeat that a Detroit City court team has ever suffered. Continuing their slump, the Tartars lost a 30-25 verdict to the light St. Francis team. Altoona, Pennsylvania, offered the Big Five, a strong independent outfit with an enviable reputation, as City's opposition in the following contest, which resulted in a 43-35 decision in Detroit's favor. The trip concluded with the defeat of West Virginia Normal, 32-25.

Back on the local court again, the Tartars faced Tri-State in a return game, minus the services of Schecter and Kaufman. These two veterans were declared ineligible due to the conference eight-semester ruling. The new Green and Gold combination defeated the Indiana five 32-28, in a slow contest. The return game with the Michigan "B" team was next on the schedule, and the inexperienced Tartar squad held them to 25 points while they were garnering 20. This was played in the Yost Field House at Ann Arbor.

The remaining four games on the schedule were all conference tilts. Mt. Pleasant took the first one by a score of 38-24. Two successive contests were held with Western State Normal of Kalamazoo, the Celery City boys winning both by scores of 40-35, and 36-33 respectively. Ypsilanti was victorious in the final, winning 37-29.

Frosh Basket Ball

THE Freshman basket ball team at City this year presages well for the Varsity of next year, for it contained some outstanding stars in the basket ball world of Detroit's high school cagers. The Frosh team on a number of occasions this year pressed the Varsity very hard and in one or two instances defeated them in scrimmage.

The Frosh this year had eight games scheduled and divided the season with four victories and four defeats, the defeats, with the exception of one, being by a very small margin. The outstanding players on the squad were Captain Cornell, Ewald, a guard, and Jamieson, a center.

Varsity Track

CAPTAINED by Bill Streng, City's premier 440 man, the 1928-9 track team finished a successful season, which was featured more by brilliant individual performance rather than by great team strength.

With but five letter winners, Streng, Silber, Green, Lowenstine, and Nosanchuck left from the year before, Coach Holmes was obliged to mould another point winning aggregation. His task was in a way lightened by the eligibility of the strong Freshman squad of last season for varsity competition.

The dashes were ably taken care of by Captain Streng, John Lewis, a member of the Olympic squad, and Les Langs, the elongated blond of last year's Frosh. Beauvais bore the brunt of both hurdles, aided by Lewis in the lows. The 880 was taken care of by the veteran Lowenstine and Spathelf, late of the Frosh squad. Williams, Buttrum, and Josselson, all newcomers to the squad, ran the distances. City was severely handicapped in the weight and field events, which in the past several years were well handled by the husky Al Zuber and Ken Doherty. Brown, late of the Frosh, was the only performer to make a specialty of these events. Lewis hurled the discus, while Langs threw the javelin in order to bolster the team points in the field events. Nosanchuck performed well in the pole vault, being one of the best vaulters in the state. Silber proved his worth by leaping six feet in the high jump, and showing promise in raising that height.

Next year's team has prospects of being a more balanced outfit, although it will be greatly handicapped by the loss of the stellar Streng. The squad will be augmented by the return of Swan, a dash man and hurdler of ability, and by Nieman, Russell, Pierson, Cannell, and Spaulding of the Frosh squad.

Relay Team

THROUGHOUT the collegiate athletic world, the Detroit City relay teams have become famous, and at every meet the quartet wearing the Green and Gold are expected to be among the winners.

Pre-season prospects seemed rather disappointing this year, as Captain Streng was the only man left from last year's championship team. John Lewis, the Olympic performer, was quite sure of a place, but the remaining two positions were doubtful. By the process of time eliminations, Langs, a Sophomore, and Lowenstine, who had formerly run the half-mile and mile, were chosen. This choice proved a happy one and the team proved their mettle at the Notre Dame and Illinois Relays, and in dual meets.

For the fifth consecutive time, this crack Green and Gold mile relay team won the event at the Penn Relays, thus setting a new record for successive victories. The fast Tartar quartet made the exceptionally speedy time of 3:26 2-5, breaking City's own record for the event, established in 1926. Lewis was the lead-off man and handed Lowenstine a lead of fifteen yards. Lowenstine turned over a twenty-yard margin to Langs, who increased this to about forty yards. Captain Streng, anchor-man, brought his fourth Penn Relay race to a conclusion with almost an eighty-yard lead.

Thus the reputation of the Tartar relay teams has been upheld and another bronze plaque has taken its place among the trophies.

Varsity Track

Michigan State vs. Detroit City

COMPETING on a waterlogged track and field, the Detroit City track men went down to defeat at the hands of the strong Michigan State aggregation on April 20, at the M. S. C. stadium. It was the tenth annual meeting of the two schools. The Spartans outnumbered the Tartars nearly three to one, and won the meet by an 85 to 46 score.

Detroit was conspicuous by its individual talent and also by its weakness in taking seconds and thirds. The outstanding star of the meet was John Lewis, City's colored flash, who got three firsts and a third for a total of sixteen points. Al Silber, also of Detroit, held down second place as far as high scoring honors went, with ten points. The time for the events was slow by comparison with other years, but considering the weather conditions which prevailed, they were very good.

Lewis and Beauvais came in first and third in the order named. Lewis and Streng finished one-two in the 220 with exceptionally good time for a rain-washed track—22.6. Streng and Langs made it one-two again in the 440, with the crack time, again considering the track, of 52.6. Beauvais was off form in the hurdles and failed to place. Detroit was exceptionally weak in the distance runs, and the only man who was considered a chance for points, failed to come through; this was due to faulty judgment on the part of Spathelf in timing his race.

In the field events Detroit was very weak. Silber being the only man to win his event, taking firsts in the broad jump and the high jump. Nosanchuk was away off form and missed on 11.6.

In the relay, the crack Detroit team walked away from State—Lewis, Langs, Lowenstine, and Streng being the team.

The Hillsdale Meet

The Hillsdale meet was an experiment to determine the actual strength of the team without running the stars in their favorite events. The result was a walkaway in favor of Detroit City, the score being 77-27. Lewis and Beauvais were the high point men, both scoring well over ten points apiece.

Lewis copped both dashes, with Beauvais a hair's breadth behind. Beauvais took his hurdle events as well as competing in the pole vault. Langs won the quarter, with Lowenstine, a former half-miler, coming in close behind. In the 880, Spathelf had little competition and romped away with an easy first. Williams and Buttrum had things their own way in the longer distances, and City garnered another ten points. City's weakness in the field events was shown by the fact that here they won their least points, Hillsdale obtaining their only two firsts in this part of the program.

Captain Streng was kept out of all of his specialties and ran anchor on the relay, which was won by the Detroit sprint artists.

Ohio Relays

Competing in the Fifth Annual Ohio Relays the Tartar squad again ably upheld the fame of Green and Gold teams both in track and field. A squad of seven men made the trip to Columbus to compete in the relays: Langs, Lewis, Lowenstine, Streng, Beauvais, Silber, Nosanchuk, and Coach Holmes.

The premier event for Detroit City was, of course, the mile relay, running the same team that won at Penn State. The weather was again anything but ideal, a steady rain reducing the entire field to a quagmire.

At first it seemed as though the Detroit team was blessed with luck, and, for the first time at such a large meet, they drew the pole position for the second heat. However, luck turned against them, the officials deciding to run the entire field at once, and Detroit was placed in its usual position, next to the outside.

Lewis led off, running a beautiful race, and finished with a good 10-yard lead; however, as he was in the outside lane, he was forced to cross the track eight yards in order to hand the baton to Lowenstine in the proper lane. Each Detroit man was forced to do this and as a result ran in total about twenty-four yards farther than DePauw, who beat them. The half-mile team was still less fortunate, running fourth in their race.

Detroit City Olympic Athletes

EARLY in September of 1922, Stanley Seitz, a member of the track team, brought into the athletic office a very slim youth and introduced him as Kenneth Doherty, a former high school chum.

This youth, six years later, became the decathlon champion of the United States, and a month later placed third among the world's all-around champions in the Olympic games at Amsterdam.

In these games, Doherty lacked less than four points of beating Harold Osborne's decathlon record, which still stands as the United States record. The last five events of the decathlon at Amsterdam were held in a downpour of rain—which makes Doherty's effort all the more remarkable, as he would have eclipsed the great Osborne's record had the weather been at all suitable.

The athletic history of John Lewis is almost as familiar to us. We first saw John in May, 1924. He was a very little Freshman in Northeastern High School, and was taking part in a dual meet at Belle Isle. John didn't get anything better than a third in his race—but he looked like a "comer."

He developed into one of the country's outstanding quarter-milers during his high school career, and entered City College in the Fall of 1927.

As a Freshman here last year he developed into a pretty good track team in himself, adding the hurdles, discus and shot to his running events, and in the Olympic tryouts he won a berth on the United States sixteen hundred-meter relay team. At Amsterdam he did not run on the team, as Barbuti, who had a few days previous been crowned four hundred-meter champion of the world, took his place. John did, however, win some firsts in meets held in Europe, defeating some of the members of the relay team upon which he had been originally picked to run.

Frosh Track

THE Frosh Track Team this year, while not making as well a balanced aggregation as last year's Frosh team, shows a great deal of potential power and promises to strengthen the Varsity where it is most needed, in the weights and distances, besides strengthening our already powerful dash group.

The Frosh have had only one meet this year, but in that they showed their actual power in defeating the Hillsdale Frosh 68 to 27. The outstanding men being: Russel, a brilliant dash man from Northern High; Neiman, a good weight prospect from Western High; Cannel, a real miler from Royal Oak; and Ballentine, an all around man from Eastern High.

Tennis

DETROIT CITY tennis teams have always been of the best in the state. In 1927, the netters were undefeated, winning from such teams as St. Xavier, Armour Tech, and Michigan State. To climax the season Irving Moss won the Michigan State Intercollegiate singles title, and James Spencer won the Michigan Collegiate Conference title. The squad as a whole won the two tournaments easily by running up many points, thus giving Detroit City the team championships.

In the year of 1928, the netmen did not fare so well. The season was disappointing until the Michigan State Intercollegiate singles title had been decided. Bruce Brayton came through unexpectedly to take the lone honors.

The current season finds the tennis team with much potential strength that will have ample opportunity to assert itself. The squad is led by Irving Moss, Detroit municipal champion, who did not compete for Detroit City last year; Richard Berg, an enthusiast who has shown marked improvement; William McNaughton, a powerful player who has made rapid strides; and Raymond Wilson, a player who lacks only experience.

Among the opponents to be met by the Tartars are: Michigan State, Western State Teachers' College, and Ypsilanti Normal. Much time will be devoted to tournament competition. The courtmen will enter the Central States Intercollegiate at Notre Dame, Michigan State Invitational at Kalamazoo, and the Michigan Collegiate Conference at Ypsilanti.

The Golf Team

WITH only one veteran left from last year's squad, the outlook at the beginning of the year for the 1929 golf team was not so good. The discovery of several talented newcomers brightened up prospects considerably, however. The team should be a well-balanced organization, as all of the men have had tournament experience in and around Detroit and have showed up exceptionally well in all of their matches. Inasmuch as the team has had no actual competition as yet the line-up is not really certain, but it seems that the team will be composed of Webb Evans, Karl Smith, John Wenzel, Sherman Willson, Sanford Bennett, and Jake Wenzel.

The team opens the season against Michigan State at East Lansing, following this by tournaments with the University of Toledo, and the General Motors Institute of Technology.

The Freshman team this year has several good men. The Freshman team will be composed of Ahern, Erickson, and Etzler, with one more man to be picked. The Frosh will pit their strength against the same teams as the Varsity, meeting the Frosh groups of the institutions.

The teams have a very fine coach in the person of Deane Sheriff, who was formerly professional at Lake Shore Country Club, and the winner of several open championships in the district.

Inter-Fraternity Athletics

THIS year again witnessed an intense and growing athletic rivalry between the various fraternities on the campus. There was more spirit displayed and a larger attendance at the games and events that the Fraters were engaged in than has been witnessed in any previous year.

The outstanding event of the fraternity athletic season was the basket ball tournament. The affair was a two game knock-out, and as the elimination of the various teams progressed, the feeling of rivalry became more pronounced.

The semi-final game was between Sphinx and Kappa Chi, in which Sphinx was outclassed thirty-seven to three. The final was a merry battle between Alpha Delta Psi and Kappa Chi, for the first half, but after that the big guns of the Kappa Chi's began to boom and the game ended thirty-one to fourteen in favor of the Chi'ans. The victory gave Kappa Chi the inter-fraternity basket ball championship for the second year in succession and the enviable record of not having a defeat on their basket ball record in two years of inter-fraternity competition.

The events next in order on the inter-fraternity calendar are the track meet and the baseball games. This last event is something new for the fraternities and should be a great help in more firmly cementing the ties of athletic friendship between the fraternities. The track meet has been held irregularly between the organizations and it is to be revived this year and it is hoped that it will be carried on in the future.

Inter-Class Athletics

THE most interesting battle of the entire inter-class athletic activities was the struggle between the Freshmen and the Sophomores in their annual football game which came this year as a culmination to the strife between the two classes. The game this year was a well fought affair, the two teams being much more evenly matched than the score admits. The Sophs had a little better of the material inasmuch as they had several former Varsity men in their lineup. The Frosh were helped materially by the fact that they had some men from the previous year's Freshman football who were ineligible for Varsity competition. The game ended with the Sophs holding the Frosh down by a twenty-seven to thirteen score.

Probably the most interesting part of the inter-class activities to the upper classmen was the basket ball tourney in which the Juniors trounced the field. They received most of their opposition from this year's redoubtable Freshmen, who seemed to have a galaxy of stars in every activity.

The Inter-class Track Meet was a runaway for the Frosh team, who on this occasion were led by John Lewis and Jimmie Russel, who by their own efforts scored more than half of their team's points.

This year's inter-class activities has done very much toward bringing out the friendly yet intense feeling of rivalry that has existed this year between the classes.

Inter-Club Athletics

THE inter-club activities far outclassed the other groups participating in intra-mural athletics this year. The competition between the groups in the club affairs has been so great that whenever a club affair has been scheduled standing room has been at a premium in the men's gym.

This year witnessed the fall of the Gas House Gang from the lofty pinnacle that they have held in inter-club athletics for several years and marked the rise of the Spanish Club as a real contender in this class of intra-murals. This new arrival brought out a three-way race in the club activities that was sure to display some exceptional competition whenever the three teams got together.

The first event of the season was the basket ball contest, which proved to be a real battle between Gas House and Campus A. C., with Gas House taking first place after a hotly fought set of finals.

The track meet was next on the list and it was here that the Spanish Club showed a pair of heels to their chief rivals, the Campus's and the Gas Housers.

The next on the program was the baseball game with the Faculty team. This game, a hotly fought contest, was witnessed by over a thousand C. C. D. students who had turned out for the Annual Field Day at Belle Isle.

Women's Athletics

THE replacement of intercollegiate competition in women's athletics by intra-mural activity marks the latest achievement in the department of Health Education for women. According to Miss Jessie Whitham, who has been responsible for the very notable forward strides of this department since its institution in the college, the establishment of intra-mural sports is a real advance. The new program of sports, with competition between classes and city districts, lends opportunity for participation not merely to the select few who are experts in the various fields, but to any or all who display an interest in sport for sportsmanship's sake and for physical betterment. The marked interest attendant upon the introduction of the new system, which is fast supplanting intercollegiate competition even in the universities, is indicative of its popularity with the women students.

Through the efforts of Miss Whitham, the Health Education department now offers a program of athletic activity as varied as is presented in most universities. In addition to the regular gymnasium, swimming, and dancing classes, are classes in playground management, from which much practical knowledge is gleaned by prospective gymnasium instructors.

Especially keen group competition in basket ball, hockey, baseball, and volley ball has been evinced this past year. To further vary the program, archery, tennis, aerial dart, and fencing instruction is now offered. Indeed, so great has been the growth and development within the department that it has been found necessary to employ the services of an additional instructor.

Riding

THE riding season, which culminated in a twenty-mile cross-country ride at Flower's Riding Academy at Pine Lake, afforded its participants a great deal of amusement and excitement as well as physical benefit. Some twenty girls will always remember the four-hour ride through autumn woods, over narrow bridges, skirting bogs, and following lake shore lines, mounted on horses which were the pick of the stables. A day which started in a nasty drizzle and which turned out glorious, with never an accident nor unpleasant incident.

Under the supervision of Miss Mary Stephens, herself an excellent equestrienne, the club met every Friday afternoon, to afford a week-end of recuperation, during the fall and well into the winter, at the Palmer Park Riding Academy.

Lessons were given the novices in the Palmer Park paddock on "slow" horses until the "passengers," the favorite adjective of Mr. Ralph Power, instructor, became accustomed to their mounts. Then, as the class became more proficient, it was allowed to canter over the miles of bridle path in Palmer Park.

Basket Ball

PERHAPS the most popular sport among the women is basket ball, and as a result there is a large amount of material from which to draw when organizing the many excellent teams of which Detroit City can boast. This year a round robin fashion of playing has been adopted by Mrs. Weils, the new coach, so that each team has the opportunity of playing every other team, thus affording variety, at the same time distributing the better players equally among the teams.

In addition to the round robin system of playing, East Side and West Side teams have been organized, that of the East Side being captained by Glenda DeLong, and that of the West Side by Myrtle Carlton. The outcome of the East Side-West Side tourney favored the West Side, which took the second and third games of a series of three.

Late in the season a series of intra-mural games were played. The City College team, captained by Myrtle Carlton, played a series of three games against the Teachers' College basketeers, captained by Pauline Katz. City showed her supremacy in the final games by trimming the Teacherites in the first two games of the series of three, making a third unnecessary.

Hockey

THIS Fall, for the first time in the history of City College, the hockey teams have been able to practise on a suitable field, with goal posts which were more than imaginary, and although the field is still inadequate, a team composed of but seven players, a scheme devised by Miss Whitam, brought very effective results.

The overwhelming number of women who turned out for hockey were organized into two different types of teams, East Side and West Side, composed of those living either east or west of Woodward Avenue, and City College and Teachers' College teams, the latter composed of freshmen attending City, who were later to be transferred to Teachers' College.

The East Side team was captained by La Verne Laidlaw, while the West Side chose Phyllis Vokes. West Side took two games of a series of three.

The captain of the Teachers' College team was Phyllis Vokes, and City's, Irene Bruderer. Teachers' College was defeated in spite of a mighty peppy and well organized team.

East and West Side teams were managed by Dorothy Atkinson and Alice McMichael, respectively. Teachers' by La Verne Laidlaw, and City's by Dorothy Atkinson.

Dancing

INTERPRETIVE dancing is an activity that scarcely can be placed under the heading of sports or athletics; yet, it assists in attaining the ultimate aim of both of these activities. It builds up and beautifies the body of the modern girl.

Dances of various sorts have been used throughout the ages to express the spirit and emotions of peoples. In the most savage tribes we find dances expressing the spirit of thanksgiving, as in the dances dedicated to the gods for the good hunting, harvests, or rains they had sent. There are also the dances of war and the athletic dances of the ancient Greeks. Modern interpretative dancing endeavors to tell a story by physical motion. A story is ascribed to a certain piece of music to form a basis for the dancer's pantomime. The interpretation depends entirely on the dancer's own artistic judgment. In this respect interpretive dancing obviously makes for greater freedom of expression than is possible in either folk or clog dancing, which are limited by certain specified forms.

Minor Sports

AERIAL DART, a game which has recently been introduced into City College, is closely comparable to Badminton, the popular lawn game of England, and it has won many devotees among the women. The tournaments are tests of skill, celerity, and quick thinking.

Fencing, like dancing, an aid to grace, is practised by a small group of co-eds, effectively disguised in what to the uninitiated would appear to be catcher's masks and overstuffed shirtwaists. For two hours each week they lunge and parry, and then, again, sometimes they don't.

The baseball season is invariably well received, but usually by those girls who participate in the majority of the other sports. This may be due to the fact that baseball is pretty strenuous for those who are not in training.

Volley ball, which until lately was squeezed into the short season between the closing of basket ball indoors and the opening of baseball, when the field can be used, has now been given a definite season of its own. The game requires a quick eye, steady judgment and a nice control of the hands.

The fall tennis tournament proved a spirited contest for the cup which is presented by the athletic department. A large number of women turned out, among whom some real tennis talent was represented. During the hard fought matches, the original number dwindled to a lone survivor, Gladys Smity, a general all-round athlete of good standing. A close second was Pauline Katz, another all-round athlete with special prowess in basket ball. The runners-up were Eleanor Kindred and Katherine Schmitdial.

W. A. C. Awards

UNDER the present honor point system, all women who earn three hundred honor points in athletics are awarded silver pins fashioned in the shield crest of the Women's Athletic Club. This year pins have been awarded to so many that their names can scarcely be recorded here. However, gold rings in the same device have been awarded Gladys Smith and Irene Bruderer, for six hundred honor points.

The highest award which can be given to City's women athletes are green leather coats bearing City's yellow D. Gladys Smith and Irene Bruderer will also receive these for having earned one thousand honor points.
