Accession Number 143
L.C. Number 66-1524

The papers of Matilda Robbins were placed in the Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs in March of 1965 and April of 1976 by her daughter, Vita Legere Henderson and were first opened for research in August of 1965. They were reprocessed in March of 1980.

Matilda Gertrude Robbins was born in Litin, Russia January 9, 1887. She arrived in the United States in December 1900. Here her name was changed from Tatania Gitel Rabinowitz. The family settled in Connecticut where she completed her education at the eighth grade level and went to work at a variety of jobs.

She became concerned with economic conditions as they affected the working class and with her brother, David, joined the Socialist Party. She was allied with the industrial union faction of that party which opposed the older craft union group. She became active in Socialist Party leadership but resigned in 1911 for a time in the dispute between the two factions, and she joined the Industrial Workers of the World.

Her career as an organizer began with an unsuccessful attempt to organize her fellow workers at the corset factory where she was employed. In November 1912 Vincent St. John, the General Secretary of the IWW sent her to Little Falls, N.Y. to lead the strike which had broken out in the textile mills there. She replaced the IWW organizers who had previously been on the scene and who had been jailed. The strike lasted three months and, when settled, resulted in some small gains for the workers.

Later she became a national organizer for the Textile Workers Industrial Union and she was sent by the IWW to other strikes to help by speaking and organizing. Among them were the 1913 Studebaker strike in Detroit and the cigar makers strike in Pittsburgh of the same year. She was briefly jailed while in Detroit. In 1914 she worked organizing textile workers in Greenville, S.C. She ceased working as an organizer for the IWW in 1915.

In 1919 her daughter, Vita Robbins Legere, was born. She later worked for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers on the Staff of Advance and for the Co-operative Society in E. St. Louis, Mo. She was also secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense League.

Robbins later moved to California with her daughter where she lived in Los Angeles, Fresno, and the San Francisco area. She remained an active socialist and served as the executive secretary of the Los Angeles chapter from 1945 to 1947. She wrote regularly for the Industrial Worker (IWW) until her death, January 9, 1963.

Matilda Robbins' papers mainly reflect her experiences as an IWW organizer and the period of her life from 1900 to 1922.
