The papers of the Reverend Father Raymond Scullin Clancy were placed in the Archives of Labor History and Urban Affairs in October, 1971, by Father John O'Connor and were opened for research in February, 1973.

Known as Detroit's "Labor Priest," Fr. Clancy was born (June 15, 1904) and educated in Detroit, graduating from the University of Detroit in 1924. After attending St. Gregory's Preparatory Seminary, Mt. Washington, Ohio, and Mt. St. Mary's Seminary of the West, Norwood, Ohio, he was ordained into the Roman Catholic priesthood May 26, 1929. For the following eleven years he served as assistant pastor and then administrator of Church of the Epiphany in Detroit.

In 1938, after special training in Roman Catholic social principles, Fr. Clancy was named executive secretary of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems which met in Detroit in January, 1939. Also named executive secretary of the (Detroit) Archdiocesan Labor Institute, he launched a program of labor education for Roman Catholic workers in 1939/40. Beginning with eight experimental parish schools, the Institute, which worked in cooperation with the Detroit Association of Catholic Trade Unionists, grew to forty schools, the largest such program in any Roman Catholic diocese in the world. In addition, Fr. Clancy became Director of the Social Action Department of the Detroit Archdiocese, a position he held into the 1950's. During this period he was a frequent spokesman for the adoption of Roman Catholic social and economic principles, especially as enunciated in the papal encyclicals, Rerum Novarum and Quadragesimo Anno, as well as post-World War II planning.

As chaplain of the Detroit ACTU, Fr. Clancy had a regular column in its paper, The Wage Earner, in the 1940's. He was also active in civic and community affairs and was a member of the Economic Club of Detroit.

An early and active supporter of the labor union movement, Fr. Clancy in November, 1939, publicly disputed Fr. Charles E. Caughlin's citation of a papal encyclical as a basis for urging striking UAW members to return to work at Chrysler. Also as an arbitrator and mediator, his services were often rendered in labor-management disputes in Detroit and Michigan from 1942 to 1957. To thank Fr. Clancy for his efforts in behalf of labor, the AFL and CIO joined together in 1954 in a testimonial dinner in his honor.

Returning to parish work, Fr. Clancy spent 1950-53 at All Saints on Fort Street in Detroit. From September, 1953, until his retirement in 1969, he was pastor of Sacred Heart parish in Roseville where he was instrumental in building Roseville's first Roman Catholic high school. He died June 2, 1971, in Port Huron, Michigan.

The papers of this collection mainly reflect Fr. Clancy's activities as an educator and executive secretary of the Archdiocesan Labor Institute, director of the Archdiocesan Social Action Department, arbitrator and mediator and supporter of the labor union movement, and advocate of Roman Catholic social and economic teachings.

Important subjects covered in the collection are:

- Arbitration and Mediation (Michigan)
- Archdiocesan Labor Institute (Detroit)
- Labor Education
- Religion and Labor
- Father Charles E. Caughlin
- Association of Catholic Trade Unionists
- Post-World War II Reconstruction
