The Social Security Department was organized in February, 1948 under the direction of Harry Becker. The department provides professional and technical advice in designing, implementing and improving collectively bargained private and public sector employment-related benefits and has lobbied on behalf of public programs like Medicare, national health insurance, the HMO Act, pension reform legislation, and the addition of disability income protection to Social Security. Since its formation, the UAW Social Security Department has established employer-financed pension programs (1949), negotiated employer contributions to worker and family health insurance (1950), secured supplemental unemployment benefits (1955), pioneered employer-paid retiree health insurance, mental health, nursing home and prescription drug benefits (1960s), bargained 30-and-out early retirement benefits and family home health, dental, vision, and hearing aid care (1970s), and expanded job and income security protection (1980s and 1990s).

In 1969 UAW President Walter P. Reuther organized the Committee for National Health Insurance with the help of the resources of the Social Security Department. The CNHI, a lobbying organization independent of but closely affiliated with the UAW, conducts research and prepares legislation in support of national health insurance.

The records in Part 2 of the UAW Social Security Department Collection consist of correspondence, reports, minutes, research studies, reference and contract negotiations files, company benefit plans and other material related to servicing the health care and social security needs of the union's members. Additional records concerning the work of the UAW Social Security Department may be found in the UAW Social Security Department: Community Health Association and the Committee for National Health Insurance Collections.
