The Committee for National Health Insurance was organized in 1969 through the efforts of UAW President Walter P. Reuther. After the passage of Medicare in 1965, enthusiasm for further health insurance changes waned. Escalating costs and competing health care made it increasingly difficult for the UAW leadership to improve health care benefits for their members through collective bargaining. The CNHI, a lobbying organization independent of but closely affiliated with the UAW, conducts research and prepares legislation in support of national health insurance.

The Committee for National Health Insurance Collection consists of minutes, correspondence, studies, reports, clippings, publications, congressional testimony and legislation related to the organization's lobbying efforts on behalf of national health insurance.

Additional files relating to the work of the Committee for National Health Insurance may be found in the UAW President's Office: Leonard Woodcock Collection and the UAW Washington Office: Stephen Schlossberg Collection.
