

AFT President's Office: Albert Shanker Collection

Papers, 1957-1997
(Bulk 1978-1994)

105 Linear Feet

Accession Number 1553
Processed: Daniel Goldner

The presidential papers of Albert Shanker have been placed in the Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs from 1981 through 2004. The American Federation of Teachers (AFT): Office of the President Collection was opened in 1991. Since the collection contained materials from four different presidents of the AFT and two different departments, the collection was determined to be useless to researchers. Also do to the importance of Albert Shanker as a leader to the AFT; a guide to his presidency was needed. In 1998 the collection was taken apart to create the AFT Presidential Collection: 1960-1974, and the Human Rights/Community Services Department. From 1997 through 2004, over 300 linear feet of materials were sent to the Reuther Library from the AFT headquarters pertaining to the tenure of Albert Shanker as president. By merging what was from the AFT: Office of the President collection and the other shipments over time, the AFT President's Office: Albert Shanker was opened January 2005.

Under the leadership of Albert Shanker, AFT membership almost tripled, organizing was expanded, and the AFT had become a union that was respected in all areas of education and labor. Albert Shanker steered the AFT through the various crises of the 1970s that included tuition tax credits, affirmative action court decision and citizens tax revolts. The AFT expanded its organizing scope to include paraprofessionals, state and local public employees and nurses.

The 1980s saw the immediate rise of education reform with the release of 'The Nation At Risk'. The AFT advanced some of these education reforms while battled other. The AFT challenged its membership to take the risks of education reform to better the lives of the children they teach, from merit pay to a peer review program that came out of the Toledo Federation of Teachers, Local 250 (the TFT collection at the Reuther Library ends in 1968.) The union also expanded its services to include more research on the issues of healthcare, privatization, state and local budgets and more. In 1985 Albert Shanker gave a speech at the National Press Club calling for a new professionalism in regards to teachers, he called for a national board for teachers. In 1987 the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards was created.

Since the 1920 the AFT has been very involved with international education and unions. See the AFT collection Part I and II and Selma Borchardt. Under Shanker's leadership the AFT expanded its interest in international issues. The AFT was very involved with the promotion of democracy and free trade unionism in the Polish Solidarity movement; also the union provided training and technical support to teacher unions in Eastern Europe with the Democracy in Education project.

During the 1990s the AFT continued to grow and prosper. Albert Shanker became the elder statesman of the labor movement and education worldwide. The union continued to push new ideas in education reform through the collective bargaining process, as in standards, restructuring of the school, and discipline through a Bill of Rights of Respect and Responsibility. In 1997, Albert Shanker was taken by cancer.

Biography of Albert Shanker

Albert Shanker is considered one of the most important labor leaders of the late 20th century. From a substitute math teacher, Shanker rose to national prominence as the president of the American Federation of Teachers. Shanker gained national attention as the militant strike leader of New York City teachers in the 1960s and was immortalized in Woody Allen's 'Sleeper' as the man who destroyed civilization with a nuclear weapon. Shanker later became known as an elder statesman on education, trade unionism and human rights. President Clinton called him "one of the greatest educators of 20th century."

Albert Shanker was born on September 14, 1928 and raised in Long Island City, Queens, New York by Russian immigrant parents. His father delivered papers and his mother worked as a sewing machine operator in the garment sweatshops. It was his mother that instilled a passion for trade unionism and the love of debate.

Shanker completed all but his dissertation at Columbia University before running out of patience and money eventually taking a job as a substitute teacher at PS 179 in East Harlem. Shanker quickly became active with the Teachers' Guild and by 1959, resigned as a math teacher to become a full time organizer for the Guild, which in 1960 became the United Federation of Teachers (UFT). Shanker was pivotal for the next eight years in changing the nature of teacher unions. By 1964 Shanker became president of the (UFT), the union that represented just over 45,000 New York City schoolteachers, a position he held till 1986.

In 1967, Shanker led a three-week strike that included not only basic trade union issues but also various education reforms such as class size, and discipline. Shanker entered the national spotlight during a volatile period of strikes in 1968 that divided New York City. At the center of the issue was community control of the school district called Ocean Hill – Brownsville. Shanker favored community control, however when union members were dismissed without due process, Shanker took the city's teachers out on strike three different times for a total of 55 days. Both strikes sent Shanker to jail.

The following year, the UFT won the right to represent paraprofessionals in the city, the deciding votes coming from the Ocean Hill-Brownsville area. In 1972, he worked with Tom Hobart, to merge the National Education Association's statewide affiliate with the AFT state affiliate, to create the New York State United Teachers. In the spring of 1975, New York City's faced bankruptcy and needed $7 billion in loans. The city laid off thousands of city employees, including 15,000 teachers. The UFT struck for five days over the issue of class size. Various unions in New York City, however, agreed to use strike funds and retirement pensions to buy city bonds to save the city. Shanker asked the UFT's Teachers' Retirement System to invest as well and on October 17, 1975, the UFT bought $150 million in city bonds.

Shanker became president of the American Federation of Teachers in 1974. Under his leadership the membership of the AFT almost tripled and the role of organizing changed in which the union included paraprofessionals, health care workers and public employees.

In 1978, Congress was considering tuition tax credits to be used for private and parochial schools. Shanker argued that it was not just about jobs but also about the future of public education for everyone, good schools and bad. The AFT joined with the National Coalition to Save Public Education, an alliance of various education consumer groups and religious groups whose sole purpose was to support a commitment to unrestricted public education. The defeat of tuition tax credits resulted in the transformation of Shanker as a militant union leader into a sincere education reformer.

Shanker initiated an experiment on December 13, 1970. On that day, his first Where We Stand column was published in the New York Times. The idea came from Arnold Beichman, a friend of Shanker's, who suggested that he place an ad in the same place every week in the Sunday New York Times. This would allow Shanker to have a weekly forum to convey his ideas to the public. Twenty-six years later and about 1,300 columns later, the 'Shanker column' became an institution in the Sunday New York Times. Every Sunday, in 800 words, Shanker wrote to a worldwide audience about education, the labor movement, human and civil rights, and even how to make perfect French bread. He believed the column was a perfect medium to "help create a balanced picture of what I was about and what the union was about."

In 1983 National Commission on Excellence in Education released the report "A Nation At Risk". Although he was initially skeptical, Shanker realized the report was not an attack on public education, but instead, showed that public education should be saved. In response, he led the AFT into a new era, and made himself into a statesman for education. Two years later, at the National Press Club in Washington DC, Shanker issued a "call for professionalism" in the teaching profession. He advocated higher standards for teachers through a national teacher examination. By 1987 the National Board of Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS) was founded. The NBPTS is a voluntary national certification body for teachers that has become a major force in education reform. Other education reforms spearheaded by Shanker during the 1980s were a simpler system to remove unproductive teachers and a peer review evaluation program--first developed in Toledo by Dal Lawrence, President of the Toledo Federation of Teachers. Shanker popularized charter schools that would give the greater flexibility to school staffs to make decisions that affect the quality of the education they provide.

By the 1990s, Shanker was a respected American statesman. He spoke around the world to government officials, school superintendents, business leaders and union leaders sought his advice and consul. As a senior vice president of the AFL-CIO, Shanker called on the union movement to develop new organizing methods that would increase professional employee union membership, and attract the new workforce of the 21st century. The education agenda that Shanker laid out in his weekly columns and his constant traveling was to promote the idea that teachers are professionals, which included a national test, peer review, charter schools with heavy school employee input, as well as standards for students. To honor his life-long devotion to education Shanker was named fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1996. To date, he is the only labor leader to sit beside Nobel laureates and Pulitzer Prize winners.

Shanker insisted on tougher standards for civil and human rights. Throughout his life, he insisted that “When men and women are imprisoned, tortured and killed because they dare to speak, write or organize, it makes no difference whether they were silenced by leftist or rightist dictators. The action must be condemned.”

Cooking was one of Shanker’s many hobbies. Other passions were stereo equipment, classical and jazz music, wines, and African folk art.

On February 22, 1997, Shanker died of cancer. He was the longest sitting president of the AFT from 1974-1997. Albert Shanker was one of the most powerful and respected American labor leaders of the late-twentieth century. Considered canny, a maverick and a tough negotiator, Shanker was also well respected and sought after for his wisdom in the development of public education, on civil rights and on trade unionism.

Brief Chronology of the Life of Albert Shanker

9/14/28 Born to immigrants from Czarist Russia, Morris, who delivered newspapers, and Mamie, a garment worker holding union cards in both the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union.

Series I AFT Office, 1967-1996, Boxes 1-13, Pages 21-31

AFT Organization Files consist of materials pertaining to the daily operation of the American Federation of Teachers, whether with organizing drives, collective bargaining, education reform or the basic make up of the AFT as an organization. Materials range from staff to vice presidents of the AFT, local leadership participating in task forces and special committees created by the AFT.

Subseries A: Administration Files, Boxes 1-6

Correspondence with staff, departments, national reps, and staff unions of the AFT are the various sections within this subseries. Materials range from memos, correspondence, reports on meetings, and philosophy of education, latest strikes or collective bargaining campaigns, legal battles as well as internal matters of the AFT. Departments files are similar to staff files but are more concentrated on reports that make up the departments within the AFT hierarchy. National Reps are the organizers of the AFT. These files can be a simple letter of assignments and duties or complete reports from the field about organizing and collective bargaining. There are two staff unions at the AFT, OPIEU local 2 and AFT Staff Union, which was a result of a merger between the in-house unions Committee for National Representatives and the Professional Union at Staff Headquarters. These files contain memos, grievances, and contracts negotiations.

Subseries B: Executive Files, 1967-1995, Boxes 7-9

This series consists of mostly correspondence to the leadership of the AFT. There are minutes, reports, newspaper articles and surveys. There is also a mass of resolutions and policy information of the AFT. There are the agendas and notes taken during the meetings by either Shanker or by his assistant Eve Sacks. There is budget information, ballots, investigations of locals, the Selden vs. Shanker fight in the early 1970s executive council files, reports on education reform in K-12 and higher education. Shanker to leadership is weekly or monthly articles that were sent by the AFT to officers in the AFT, articles range from education, labor, international or political issues.

Subseries C: Meetings, 1975-2000, Boxes 10-13

Meetings contain various meetings, committees and task forces of the AFT. Conventions hold materials that consist of the daily operations of the convention; correspondence with invited guest, roll calls, committee member lists proposed resolutions and constitutional changes. Occasionally there are speeches from guests and opening remarks by Shanker. QuEST contains reports, speeches and mostly correspondence to those invited. Meetings are caucus correspondence, AFT standing committees, task forces and program and policy council materials. A majority of these files contain correspondence to members of these committees and list of those serving; some contain reports, policy, resolutions, constitutional change requests and minutes of the meetings.

Futures II report, published in 2000, was placed in this collection on the discretion of the AFT archivist. Albert Shanker, as well as the executive council, realized that for the AFT to survive, drastic changes were needed. A reorganizing of the AFT was put into place in 1992. The AFT archivist felt that in order for the researcher to understand the internal workings of the AFT and to fulfill Shanker's goal of realigning the AFT, the report was added.

Subseries D: Miscellaneous, 1975-1996, Box 13

Various reports, surveys, correspondence that did not fit anywhere else. The subseries only consists of six files

Series II. AFT Affiliates, 1968-1997, Boxes 13-29, Pages 32-55

AFT Affiliates contains correspondence, reports, memos, notes, court proceedings, organizing and collective bargaining information from or to the AFT.

Subseries A: Locals, 1968-1997, Boxes 13-26

File numbers are the local numbers. Series contains general communications to the AFT office of the president or cc to the office of the president, which include: reports, surveys, visit confirmation of Albert Shanker, general activities, strike information and updates, mergers, education reform initiatives, press releases and court cases. There are also communications from rank and file members about grievances, wrongdoings in the local or needed support in collective bargaining elections, defense cases or election problems.

A majority of the communication with New York locals in the 2000 range deal with the Education Association pull out of NYSUT in the mid 1970s which is usually a simple letter stating that the local is pulling out of the AFT. UFT files are rich with materials pertaining New York City's education reform and politics. The Panama Canal Zone files deal mainly with the issues of bargaining with the federal government and the relinquishment of the Canal Zone to Panama. Public Employees Federation, Local 4053 is a unique local in New York that is an affiliation of the AFT and the SEIU. A majority of the files pertain to a court case about dues to the AFT.

Subseries B: State Federations/Councils, 1974-1996, Boxes 26-29

State federation and council are alphabetical and are not filed by local number; they are listed as folder number. The councils are those groups of locals that formed a council to speak as one; they are usually higher education locals. This series contain information about how state federations or councils keep peace with the larger and smaller locals in their respected states, battles with the state

NEA, mergers, legislative and court issues, organizing and financial assistance from AFT.

Series III. AFL-CIO, 1973-1997, Boxes 29-36, Pages 56-63

Series III contains information about the relationship with the AFL-CIO and the AFT during the tenure of Albert Shanker. The series contains correspondence, reports, surveys, jurisdiction disputes, and communications with unions that are members of the AFL-CIO. Those unions that left the AFL-CIO and returned are a part of this series.

Subseries A: Article XX cases, 1975-1994, Boxes 29-30

Article XX document affiliation and jurisdiction disputes with other AFL-CIO union, usually with AFSCME, SEIU and Teamsters. There is a lot of information about the Public Employee Federation including court transcripts. The dispute with AFSA is about duties in restructuring of schools.

Subseries B: Departments, Committees and Organizations, 1973-1996, Boxes 30-34

Department, committee and organizations files are regular general correspondence, occasionally there are reports, polls, articles and internal operations of these departments and committees, activity reports, minutes of meetings, press releases, studies on various public and professional employees attitudes toward unions. Albert Shanker was very active with the Department for Professional Employees, Public Employees Department, International Department and various organizations dealing with international matters sponsored by the AFL-CIO. There is also a section dealing with communications with AFL-CIO state and local councils. There are very few materials on the internal operations of the AFL-CIO and re-affiliations with the Teamsters and UAW.

Subseries C: Member Unions of AFL-CIO, 1974-1997, Boxes 35-36

This subseries contains correspondence, newsletters, articles and reports from unions that are members of the AFL-CIO. Usual recurrence is correspondence from the AFT to unions about cooperating with the NEA and not the AFT or information about anti-AFL-CIO used by the NEA. There are numerous form letters about strikes and support on boycotts. Some good details about the PATCO strike.

AFSCME files are full of information about disputes and posturing by AFSCME against the AFT.

Series IV. Chronological Files From Albert Shanker/Correspondence Logs, 1978-1992, Boxes 36-40, Pages 64-66

Chronological files from Albert Shanker are letters that went out. Researchers will need to refer not only to this series but other series for correspondence that came in. Correspondence logs are bound books that contain information about every piece of mail that came into the office with subject information. Occasionally there is information on action taken.

Series V. College and Universities, 1972-1997, Boxes 41-44, Pages 67-73

This series contains correspondence relating to education policy from professors, administrators and students, appearances by Shanker to speak or participate in lectures (sometimes with follow up by the local press), and work on various boards. Other materials are reports and research papers. Harvard materials include the time Shanker taught a class in the late 1980s. There are also files on Canadian Universities.

Series VI. Federal Government, 1968-1997, Boxes 45-51, Pages 74-80

Series is correspondence, notes, memos, and copies of bills relating to the U.S. federal government and issues that the AFT is involved with.

Subseries A: House and Senate Bills, 1973-1987, Boxes 45-46

HR and S are files to specific bills at the House of Representative and Senate. Usually there is the AFT letter asking for support of a bill or to defeat it. Also there is correspondence responding to the request.

Subseries B: Departments and Branches, 1968-1997, Boxes 46-51

General correspondence to and from various government agencies. Papers range from invitations to appear, policy stance on education and labor reform. There is extensive information on Goals 2000, and creation of the Department of Education. Presidential candidates files contain information on AFT policy for presidential nominees, decisions on supporting certain nominees as well as support in presidential races. Congressional correspondence contains letters from members of the Congress and Senate that are thank-yous, invitations or short notes about legislation.

White House Competitiveness Policy Council files contain meeting minutes from the council itself, with correspondence and draft reports and the final report. Complete transcripts of the subcommittee on education that Shanker chaired is with these files. The CPC subcommittee covered a wide array of education reform issues but centered on the issues of national standard assessments, accountability and student to work initiatives.

Series VII. International, 1973-1997, Boxes 51-55, pages 81-85

Materials related to the AFT being apart of the free trade union movement worldwide. There is correspondence, reports, memos, newsletters and meeting minutes related to various international teacher unions or foreign government agencies. There is extensive correspondence, reports, memos, and newsletters with international teacher organizations.

Subseries A: Correspondence with Government Offices and Teacher Unions, 1973-1997, Boxes 51-53

Communication about travel arrangements to countries and their teacher unions. General correspondence about assistance in international programs to help education systems or to assist in getting jobs in the United States. Reports on conditions as well as brief histories of the countries major unions, education programs, human rights or the teacher union movement. Interesting information on South African apartheid, teacher organizing and university protests.

Subseries B: Labor Organizations and Meetings, 1974-1996, Boxes 53-55

The organizations and meetings are with education and labor organizations that consist of reports and minutes. There are correspondence relating to upcoming meetings and policy. ICFTU and IFFTU files reveal information on the development of free trade unions in Latin and South America, Europe and Asia.

Series VIII. NEA and US Independent Unions, 1968-1997, Boxes 55-56, pages 86-88

Series contains reports, memos, correspondence and general information relating to the often-volatile relationship that existed between the AFT and the NEA.

Subseries A: NEA, 1968-1997, Boxes 55-56

Series on NEA is alphabetical and consists of correspondence, reports, notes, minutes and transcripts. Merger files contain correspondence, press releases, and newspapers articles about meetings. NEA and NEA convention files contain a plethora of information both anti of NEA by AFT or visa versa. They contain correspondence, press releases, notes, reports, propaganda, views of the AFT convention from NEA delegates and visa versa.

Subseries B: NEA Locals and State Associations, 1972-1996, Box 56

Correspondence, reports, meetings, related that local or state association. Occasionally information on potential mergers or affiliation

Subseries C: Independent Unions, 1975-1992, Box 56-62

Correspondence with unions not affiliated with the AFL-CIO. Majority of the communications are inquiring about affiliating with the AFT or with the AFL-CIO itself.

Series IX. Publications, 1960-2002, Boxes 57-62, Pages 89-96

This series has three subseries, all-pertaining to publishing, whether it is published materials or correspondence with publishers. There are articles, correspondence, memos, and drafts

Subseries A: Articles about/by Shanker, 1967-2002, Box 57-58

This subseries contains articles about or written by Shanker. They are not indexed. At the end of the series blurbs in books and letters-to-the-editor are in separate folders.

Subseries B: Correspondence with Publishers, 1974-1996, Boxes 58-59

Correspondence with publishers contains a range of materials from upcoming articles in which the publisher wanted feedback, drafts of Shanker articles and regular correspondence with publishers or from readers. Occasionally there will be letters to the editor if there is sequence of correspondence. In the New Republic files there are numerous correspondences about Where We Stand. The Where We Stand column began publication in the New Republic in 1990

Subseries C: Publications, 1960-1996, Boxes 59-62

This series contains various publications that Shanker kept or where found in the correspondence/subject files and moved to this series. Topics range from education, race issues, labor, and Communism. This subseries is in two sections, AFT publications and other publications.

AFT section contains published materials by the AFT ranging from standards, goals of the AFT and QuEST readers, which will contain transcripts from speeches at QuEST. The file range is 59.15 through 59.48

Section ‘other publications’ has various publications that Shanker held on to. Shanker claimed to be a magazine junky, and this series shows an example of the varied subjects Shanker read. ‘Educational Excellence Network’ was a monthly news clipping service run by Diane Ravitch and Gil Sewall. The Coalition of Essential Schools, whose chairman was TheodoreSizer, published Horace. Each issue would contain a report on one education issue. This file covers 1985 through 1993.

Series X. Speeches and Interviews, 1968-1996, Boxes 63-66, Pages 97-109

This series are transcripts of speeches and interviews given by Albert Shanker. The archive does not have all of these speeches and interviews in audio form. These are not all the speeches and interviews that Mr. Shanker gave in his lifetime, but are the only ones that were received by the archives. The speeches show the progression of various education reform initiatives undertaken by the AFT and Shanker’s views on communism, the labor movement, and international education. Testimony and statements to Congress are included in the speeches section. The interviews are a separate section and are occasionally more casual on Shanker’s views of people, the labor movement and his own personal history.

Series XI. Subjects, 1956-1997, Boxes 66-96, Pages 110-136

This series tries to mirror the filing system of the AFT office of the president, however the archivist did take some liberties. The series contains correspondence, reports, memos, white papers, minute meetings and transcripts, court proceedings, articles and clippings. There is extensive information about Tuition Tax Credits, Quotas (especially with the Bakke Case), and the formation of the NBPTS. The files of the Forum of Educational Organization Leaders (FEOL) cover a wide area of education subjects. Freedom House files contains reports about human rights, international diplomacy and anti-communist programs. Miscellaneous files have correspondence from teachers, fans and enemies.

Subseries A: Department of Education - States, 1974 – 1997, Boxes 73-74

Subseries contains correspondence with either the state department/board of education, city or county department/board of education. The materials cover areas pertaining to AFT affiliates, invitations to speak at conferences, and information about various education reforms.

Series XII. Where We Stand, 1970-1997, Boxes 97-100, Pages 137-142

This series contains information of not only the creation of a different Where We Stand column every week, but various indexes and lists created by the AFT to help with the demand by the general public to get specific Where We Stand columns. NYSUT with the help of the AFT and the Walter P. Reuther Library created a Where We Stand database. The website is <http://www.nysut.org/shanker/index.html>. To learn more about the columns impact, read the Shanker biography at the beginning of the guide, or at the Albert Shanker Institute website, <http://www.shankerinstitute.org/AT/teacher7.html>

Subseries A: Drafts, 1970-1997, Box 97

Where We Stand series contains drafts, correspondence about the draft, index listings of various years and a complete list of the columns from 1970-1997, not full text. The drafts and correspondence are not a complete run. 'Where We Stand Columns and index' contain an index created at the AFT and the entire WWS from that year.

Subseries B: Correspondence, 1984-1997, Boxes 97-100

Subseries contains correspondence about Where We stand columns. They are arranged by date received or answered. They are from teachers to heads of state, from fans to enemies.

Series XIII. Memorial and Personal Effects, 1974-1997, Boxes 100-101, Pages 143-144

This series contains correspondence, emails, and lists, cards and speeches all related to the death of Albert Shanker in 1997. How We Knew Him is a compilation of stories from AFT staff about Shanker and The Power of Ideas is a collection of quotes, and statements by Shanker.

The personal effects section is materials found by the archivist from Shanker's office that did not really fit in any other series and add a personal account of who Albert Shanker was in this collection guide.

Series XIV Travel Calendars, Schedules, Phone Messages, 1974-1996, Boxes 101-105, Page 145

This series contains Shanker's daily schedules in and out of the office. Meetings, phone messages and the topics. Dinners with people, vacations taken and doctor appointments from general checkups to his chemo sessions.

Numbered information are in folders, the rest of the series are in bound volumes. While reviewing these materials double -check any meetings, there were numerous revisions on computer printed schedules.

INDEXES

There are four indexes to the collection:

AFT Affiliates Index for series II. Pages 146-153

Publications Index for series IX but articles about or by Albert Shanker were not indexed. Pages 154-158
