Abstract:	The records of the Pan American World Airways (PAA) Master Executive Council (MEC) span from the 1970s to 1991 when Pan Am ceased operations. The PAA MEC worked to ensure its pilots had fair working agreements, and focused on retirement and insurance for all levels of cockpit crew. In 1980, Pan Am bought National Airlines (NAL) in an attempt to expand their domestic routes and increase revenue. The MEC pursued an evenhanded merging of the two seniority lists, however the end product caused some frustration among the pilot group, particularly those lower on the seniority list. In the end, the merger wasn't enough to save the airline and PAA declared bankruptcy on January 8, 1991. The PAA MEC Records include MEC meeting minutes, agendas, and supporting documents from the 1980s and 1990s, as well as administrative, and Retirement and Insurance Committee files from the 1970s-1980s. The Pan American-National Airline merger is covered through subject files, arbitration hearing transcripts, and exhibits from both the PAA and NAL ALPA, and the PAA and NAL Flight Engineers International Association (FEIA).

History

The records of the Pan American World Airways (PAA) Master Executive Council (MEC) span from the 1970s to 1991 when Pan Am ceased operations. Pan Am's peak years were the late 1960s and early 1970s, after which, because of the 1973 oil crisis, lower revenue, and aging aircraft, Pan Am went on the decline. The PAA MEC worked to ensure its pilots had fair working agreements, and focused on retirement and insurance for all levels of cockpit crew. In 1980, Pan Am bought National Airlines (NAL) in an attempt to expand their domestic routes and increase revenue. The MEC worked hard to ensure an evenhanded merging of the two seniority lists, however the end product caused some frustration among the pilot group, particularly those lower on the seniority list. The merger, however, wasn't enough to save the airline and even after attempts to restructure the airline and the sale of some routes the airline couldn't continue and declared bankruptcy on January 8, 1991, ceasing operations December 4, 1991.
