Dr. Madeleine M. Leininger placed her papers in the Wayne State University Archives in June of 1995, and the collection was opened to researchers in 2005.

Madeleine M. Leininger was born in Sutton, NE on July 13, 1925, lived on a farm with four brothers and sisters, and graduated from Sutton High School. She credits an aunt who suffered from congenital heart disease with encouraging her to enter the field of nursing. In 1945, the post-depression period, Madeleine and her sister entered the Cadet Nurse Corps and a diploma program at St. Anthony's School of Nursing in Denver, CO. They were the only persons entering the nursing profession within several nearby counties. Madeleine Leininger went on to receive a Bachelor of Science degree in Biological Science, with a minor in Philosophy and Humanistic Studies, from Benedictine College (formerly Mount St. Scholastica College) in Atchison, KS.

In 1950, Leininger opened a psychiatric nursing service and educational program at Creighton University in Omaha, NE. In 1954, she received a Master of Science in Nursing degree, with a minor in Psychiatric Mental Health Nursing and Psychology, at The Catholic University of America in Washington, DC. She moved on to serve as Associate Professor of Nursing and Director of the Graduate Program in Psychiatric Nursing at the University of Cincinnati from 1954 to 1960. There she began the first graduate program in psychiatric nursing at the University, as well as the first clinical specialist program in child psychiatric nursing in the country. During this time she also co-authored one of the first psychiatric nursing texts, Basic Psychiatric Nursing Concepts (1960), which has been published in eleven languages and used worldwide.

Early in her career, Leininger observed that traditional psychiatric interventions did not adequately address the needs and behaviors of children of differing cultural backgrounds. While at the University of Cincinnati, she discussed her concerns regarding the influence of cultural factors in nursing care, as well as the potential of integrating the fields of nursing and anthropology, with visiting professor Margaret Mead. In search of answers, Leininger embarked upon a doctoral program in Cultural and Social Anthropology at the University of Washington in Seattle and, in 1965, became the first professional nurse to earn a Ph.D. in anthropology.

Dr. Leininger was appointed Professor of Nursing and Anthropology at the University of Colorado in 1966 – the first joint appointment of a professor of nursing and a second discipline in the United States. She was Dean, Professor of Nursing, and Lecturer in Anthropology at the University of Washington, School of Nursing from 1969 to 1974. In 1973, under her leadership, the University of Washington was recognized as the outstanding public institutional school of nursing in the United States.

From 1974 to 1980, Dr. Leininger served as Dean, Professor of Nursing, and Adjunct Professor of Anthropology at the University of Utah College of Nursing, and in 1981 she began her tenure at Wayne State University as Professor of Nursing and Director of the Center for Health Research at the College of Nursing, as well as Adjunct Professor of Anthropology in the College of Liberal Arts. While at Wayne State, Dr. Leininger won numerous awards, including the prestigious President's Award for Excellence in Teaching, the Board of Governors' Distinguished Faculty Award, and the Gershenson's Research Fellowship Award. In 1990, she was presented with the Women in Science Award from California State University, in addition to many other honors and awards she received throughout her career. Dr. Leininger retired as professor emeritus from Wayne State University on June 1, 1995.

Throughout her career, Dr. Leininger has been a pioneer and leader in promoting quality nursing care through transcultural understanding. In the early 1960s, she brought nursing and anthropology together to create the field of transcultural nursing – a formal area of nursing study and practice that focuses upon the comparative study of world cultures in order to provide culture-specific and culture-universal nursing care. She developed her theory of Culture Care Diversity and Universality, one of the earliest nursing theories, and coined the term “Culturally Congruent Care” as the goal of this theory. During this period, she also developed the Ethnonursing method, the first research methodology developed specifically for nursing studies. As a doctoral student in the mid-1960s, she conducted the first transcultural nursing field study, living alone with the Gadsup Tribe of the Eastern Highlands of New Guinea.

In 1966, Dr. Leininger developed the first course in transcultural nursing while a professor at the University of Colorado, and established the first masters and doctoral programs in transcultural nursing at the University of Utah in 1974. Since the mid 1960s, she has offered special undergraduate, graduate, and post-doctoral courses in transcultural nursing, human care, and qualitative research methods to nurses worldwide. She initiated certification of nurses in transcultural nursing, and has served as a research mentor and chairperson for numerous master, doctoral, and post-doctoral students. Dr. Leininger has also founded several professional organizations, including the Transcultural Nursing Society in 1974, and the International Association of Human Care in 1978, and served as first full-time president of the American Association of Colleges of Nursing. In addition, she established and served as first editor of the Journal of Transcultural Nursing from 1989 to 1995.

Dr. Leininger is a nationally and internationally known educator, author, theorist, administrator, researcher, consultant, and public speaker. She has been a distinguished visiting professor and scholar at approximately 70 universities in the United States, Canada, and overseas. As of 1995, she has written 25 books, published over 200 articles and book chapters, produced numerous audio and video recordings, and developed a software program. She has also given over 850 public lectures around the world. Her areas of expertise are transcultural nursing, comparative human care, qualitative research methods, cultural care theory, culture of nursing and health fields, anthropology, and the future of nursing.

The papers in this collection reflect Dr. Leininger's professional career as an educator and academic administrator (1956-1995), writer (1961-1995), lecturer (1965-1995), consultant (1971-1992), and leader in the field of transcultural nursing (1966-1995).

Special collections of Dr. Leininger's work since the 1960s are also held at the Transcultural Nursing Society dedicated library on the campus of Madonna University in Livonia, MI and at the Boston University Archives where her papers are included in the collection of nurse theorists.

Series VIII. Dissertations; 1953, 1966-1992, Box 16 (folders 2-5)

Dr. Leininger's Master's of Science in Nursing Dissertation from The Catholic University of America, and her Doctoral Dissertation in Anthropology from The University of Washington, along with related correspondence and research material.

Appendix A: Chronological list of the workshops and conferences found in Series IV, Boxes 7 thru 12.

Non-manuscript material,

The collection also contains twelve audio recordings, twenty video recordings (including three duplicate copies and a three-reel set), three black and white photographs, one color photograph, and a Visa application with color photograph attached. These materials have been placed in the Library's audiovisual collection.

Series I

Correspondence 1969-1995

Box 1 (folders 1-46)

This series contains correspondence relating to Dr. Leininger's professional activities and travels in the United States and abroad. A large portion of this material consists of letters and notes from nurses and nursing students worldwide requesting information on Dr. Leininger's transcultural nursing and human care theories, doctoral programs, and practice. These represent only a sample of the approximately ten letters received daily by Dr. Leininger between 1975 and 1995. Also of interest are Dr. Leininger's communications with the National Center for Nursing Research which illustrate her efforts to overcome bias against qualitative research studies.

Series II

Writings, 1961-1995

Box 1 (folders 47-49) thru Box 3 (folders 1-26)

These files relate to Dr. Leininger's writings, audiovisual works, and related materials. This series is divided into five subseries (A through E).

Subseries A: Published works, 1961-1995, Box 1 (folders 46-48) and Box 2 (folders 1-32)

This subseries includes several books authored, co-authored, and/or edited by Dr. Leininger, book chapters, published articles, and the handbook for the Leininger/Templin/Thompson Ethnoscrypt Qualitative Research Software Program created by Dr. Leininger and used by doctoral students in the Wayne State University School of Nursing. These works define Dr. Leininger's theories of transcultural nursing and human caring, as well as the application of those theories in nursing practice. A significant portion of these writings focus on issues of cultural care, the future of nursing, and nursing research. Files are arranged chronologically by type of publication. Book chapters and articles are grouped by year or year span.

Subseries C: Audio- and videotape production records, 1980-1992, Box 2 (folders 44-49)

This subseries contains information relating to several of the audio- and videotapes produced by Dr. Leininger, including recordings of class and conference lectures and culture-specific interviews. These recordings have been used worldwide by many institutions and organizations for educational purposes. The video Portraits of Excellence was included in a 14-part documentary that focuses on the life and work of notable nurse theorists. The 1989 video recording Transcultural Nursing: Discovery and challenges was produced by Madonna University in Livonia, MI and originally aired on Madonna Magazine cable television station on March 11, 1992.

Series III

Academic Administration and Teaching, 1956-1995
Box 3 (folders 27-96) thru Box 6

These files relate to Dr. Leininger's professional career as a university administrator and educator. The series is divided into four subseries (A through D).

Subseries A: University records, 1956-1995, Box 3 (folders 27-96) thru Box 5 (folders 1-5)

Materials in this subseries relate to Dr. Leininger's professional career as an educator, university administrator, and research center director. Universities are listed chronologically according to history of employment. Files within university records are listed alphabetically. The earliest records, from the University of Cincinnati, are limited to program publications. Records from later university appointments contain administrative materials, extensive course descriptions, research reports, recommendations/proposals for program development, and yearly reports highlighting Dr. Leininger's activities. Of particular interest are files relating to the first class in transcultural nursing, developed and taught by Dr. Leininger in 1966 at the University of Colorado School of Nursing, and the first grant proposal and subsequent doctoral program in transcultural nursing, developed by Dr. Leininger at the University of Utah and approved in 1977.

Series IV

Conferences and Workshops, 1965-1995
Boxes 7 thru 12

This series contains manuscripts, notes, brochures, and correspondence regarding some of the many workshops and conferences attended by Dr. Leininger and the public addresses she delivered throughout North America and abroad. Many of these papers are unpublished. All files are arranged chronologically by conference date. A description of individual conferences and workshops, including titles of papers presented, is provided in Appendix A and arranged in chronological order.

Series V

Consultations, 1971-1993
Box 13 (folders 1-28)

This series contains records relating to a sample of Dr. Leininger's many consultative projects, the majority of which deal with nursing program development and nursing research. Of particular interest are Dr. Leininger's consultations with May A. Yoshida at the University of Toronto in 1978 and 1979 which resulted in the first transcultural nursing program and grant in Canada. Papers in this series consist primarily of correspondence and project reports. Consultations are listed by name of institution and are arranged in chronological order by date of project(s).

Series VI

Organizations and Associations, 1968-1995
Box 13 (folders 29-85) thru Box 15 (folders 1-27)

Dr. Leininger has maintained active membership and served as officer, board, or committee member in numerous organizations and associations. The records in this series relate to some of those organizations and consist primarily of annual meeting and conference materials, correspondence, board minutes, committee reports, directories, newsletters, and, in some cases, articles of incorporation and by-laws. Dr. Leininger was the founder of several of these organizations, including the Committee on Nursing and Anthropology (CONNA, 1968) and the Transcultural Nursing Society (TCNS, 1974), and she was the founder and editor of the Journal of Transcultural Nursing from 1989 to 1995. In 1978, Leininger initiated the International Association for Human Caring (IAHC), which began as an annual national conference designed for scholars to share ideas, research and theories of care. She was also the first full-time President of the American Association of Colleges of Nursing (AACN) from 1970 to 1972, where she established the structure and original funding for the organization. Records in this series are arranged alphabetically, with material within folders in chronological order. Of special interest is material related to the 17th Annual Conference of the Transcultural Nursing Society held in 1991 in Detroit, MI, which includes extensive plans for the event and proclamations from both the Governor of Michigan and Mayor of Detroit declaring September 17, 1991 to be "Transcultural Nursing Day."

Series VII

Personal and Biographical Records, 1969-1995
Box 15 (folders 28-64) and Box 16 (folder 1)

The papers in this series include biographical data in the form of brief sketches and profiles used to introduce Dr. Leininger to her readers and speaking audiences, as well as several feature articles; vitae and newspaper clippings that describe her professional activities in depth, and letters from friends, colleagues, and students acknowledging Dr. Leininger's contributions throughout the years. The honors and awards found in this collection are a mere sampling of the many Dr. Leininger received during her career, as are the letters of appreciation found here. Of special interest are the annual Christmas letters sent to family and friends which detail her activities, both personal and professional, and Dr. Leininger's quotations, collected poems and prayers which give insight into her personal philosophies and beliefs. Files are arranged in alphabetical order with the exception of Honors and Awards, which are arranged chronologically.
