| Abstract:                 | George E. Gullen Jr. was the sixth president of Wayne State University. An alumnus, he first joined the university in an official capacity as Vice President of University Relations in 1966 after serving ten years as a vice president of American Motors Corporation. Gullen was named acting president of Wayne State in 1971 and fully appointed as university president in 1972. He stepped down as President in 1978. During Gullen's presidency, many developments were made both academically and physically to Wayne State University. Academic units were reorganized and the university broke ground on many structures and buildings. Under his leadership, the Wayne State University School of Medicine became the largest single-campus medical school in the nation. During this time, the university also took steps to address gender inequality and inequity by adopting an affirmative action policy, establishing the President's Commission on the Status of Women, creating a Women's Center, and making salary equity adjustments to women. Gullen also appointed the first woman vice president in the university's history. This collection consists of correspondence, memoranda, meeting minutes and agendas, financial records, proposals, agreements and contracts, committee rosters and reports, speeches, photographs, and news clippings documenting George Gullen Jr.'s presidency and the work of the Office of the President during his tenure. Particularly well documented are the university's affirmative action policy, the organization and administration of colleges and schools, the development of the University Clinics Building and the School of Medicine, university committees, and relations with the Michigan legislature. |

Biographical / Historical

George E. Gullen Jr. was the sixth president of Wayne State University. An alumnus, he first joined the university in an official capacity as Vice President of University Relations in 1966 after serving ten years as a vice president of American Motors Corporation. In 1971, he was named acting president of Wayne State following the resignation of William R. Keast. Gullen was fully appointed as university president in 1972.

Throughout Gullen's presidency, many developments were made both academically and physically to Wayne State University. Academic units such as the College of Education and Graduate Division were reorganized, the university began phasing out Monteith College, and the College of Lifelong Learning was established. As a great deal of physical expansion took place during Gullen's tenure, Wayne State grew from a collection of buildings into a college campus. The university built the Walter P. Reuther Library of Labor and Urban Affairs, the Kresge Research Building, the DeRoy Apartment Building, several malls, and the University Clinics Building. Under his leadership, the Wayne State University School of Medicine became the largest single-campus medical school in the nation.

Despite such growth, Wayne State experienced financial hardship during this time. This required the university to layoff employees and increase tuition. Facing resistance from students, staff, and faculty, Gullen used his position to lobby for additional aid from the Michigan legislature. He also worked to engage local politicians, businesses, and community groups, leading to advantageous partnerships for the university. During Gullen's tenure, Wayne State also took steps to address gender inequality and inequity. In the 1970s, the university adopted an affirmative action policy, established the President's Commission on the Status of Women, created a Women's Center, and made salary equity adjustments to women. Gullen also appointed the first woman vice president in the university's history.

George Gullen stepped down as President of Wayne State University in 1978 at the age of 65, as required by the university's age policy. He was succeeded by Thomas N. Bonner who served in the position until 1982.
