Abstract

The Library Science Department was included in the College of Education until 1984, after which it fell under the administration of the Dean of University Libraries. The department was then renamed the Library and Information Science Program in 1993, and in 2009 the Board of Governors created the School of Library and Information Science.

This collection contains the Library Science Student Association's correspondence, programming documents, and financial information from 1962 to 1976. This particular student organization no longer formally exists at Wayne State University, but there are numerous other active library and information science student organizations on campus.
